Indonesians Ask Truman To Help Put End to War

Resort to Guerilla Tactics as Dutch Take Virtually All Strategic Points

Batavia, July 24 (AP).—Indonesians, calling on the United States to help stop the war, tonight planned guerilla fighting.

The powerfully equipped Dutch army in four days of mobile warfare apparently has won its campaign for control of Java's strategic areas.

Only on the northern approach to their capital of Jogjakarta did the Indonesians report a major success, and this claim was denied by the Dutch.

In the central Java area, where the Dutch earlier had penetrated within 30 airline miles of Jogjakarta, the Indonesians said their troops had slashed behind armor-supported Netherlands forces and rolled the Dutch back 12 miles toward the north coast port of Semarang. This Republican advance reportedly carried through smoldering Salatiga and the highway junction of Toentang.

Win Spectacular Victories

Elsewhere the Dutch won spectacular victories, sometimes after Indonesian forces seemingly had vanished into thin air. In the east, Dutch marines sheared off a 2400-square-mile segment and overran the Bandowoso area, richest rice supply region on the island. This put the Dutch in control of the entire area east of a line running from Probolinggo on the Madoera Strait south to the Indian Ocean.

In the west, Dutch tanks in a swift 75-mile advance from Bandoeng had captured the major Republican port of Cheribon, birthplace of the still-disputed Indonesian independence agreement. This force of 50 tanks, the Indonesian radio said, bypassed Soemedang and Kadipaten.

A high Dutch officer said other Dutch units, operating between the eastern and central fronts, captured the key Indonesian stronghold of Malang.

Unable to match their equipment against the tanks and aircraft of the Dutch, the Indonesians now were discussing how to conduct a fight in which snipers and spears might play a more important part than armored cars and planes.

President Soekarno hinted at the new plan in an impassioned speech over the Jogjakarta radio.

Appeals to Whole People

Declaring that there will be "no law and order in Indonesia until we have our freedom," he appealed to the "whole Indonesian people — soldiers, laborers, religious leaders and especially youth—to fight the Dutch."

"Let each home, each river, each forest be the stronghold of your defense. Try to reoccupy every inch of our beloved soil taken from us by the Dutch," he declared.

Soekarno also broadcast an appeal to President Truman and the American people "to exert every effort to halt this war in Indonesia" and "stand up to the principles of justice and right for

House Holds Up Action Till Today On Arms Merger

The House yesterday held up consideration of the bill for unification of the armed services after it had passed the Senate by unanimous consent.

This action by the House, which delays final approval of the measure until today, was taken under a rule which requires a conference report to lie over 24 hours unless unanimous consent is given to immediate consideration.

As it now stands, the measure provides for a single national military establishment headed by a civilian Secretary of Defense with Cabinet rank. Within the establishment would be departments of Army, Navy, and Air Forces, each with a civilian secretary without Cabinet status at its head.

House Approves 11 Millions For Truman's Loyalty Probe

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The House yesterday approved 11 millions dollars of the $24,900,000 requested by the President to carry out his Federal worker loyalty program.

It made the big slash in funds requested for the Civil Service Commission. The President asked $16,160,000 for the commission. The House voted $3,500,000 after its Appropriations Committee reported that it was not satisfied with the "elaborate" investigative plans of that agency.

The FBI was given $7,500,000 of the $8,740,000 requested by the President.

The bill was sent to the Senate where opposition may develop to any appropriation of funds to carry out the loyalty investigation. Incidentally, the Civil Service Commission will appeal to the Senate for additional funds.

As the bill now stands, the FBI would have enough money to hire about 3000 additional employes and the Civil Service Commission could hire from 1000 to 1200 new workers.

The House bill gives the FBI enough money to make a loyalty check of all employes now on the Federal payroll. However, the $3,500,000 proposed for Civil Service would be sufficient to make only a partial check of a small percentage of new employes and it would be forced to drop its plans for full field investigations of the applicants of so-called "sensitive" positions.

Meantime, the Rees Federal employe loyalty bill appears to have been killed by delays. The Senate Civil Service Committee again failed to act on it. The bill is supposed to be brought up again at a meeting tomorrow. However, both Chairman Langer and Senator Chavez (D., N. Mex.) are outspoken in their opposition. Langer said the committee simply hadn't had time to consider "a bill of this great importance which may take their very existence from Federal workers."

RETIREMENT: The Senate committee yesterday made a last-minute effort to save the omnibus retirement bill. It voted to substitute the House-approved Stevenson bill for the more liberal Langer-Chavez retirement measure.

But the compromise bill appears to be doomed if unanimous consent

Rent Control Extension Sent Truman

Continuance of D. C. Law Through March Virtually Assured By Senate Action

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Extension of the District rent control law through March 31, 1948, was virtually assured yesterday when the Senate receded from a previous vote and accepted the House version of the legislation.

The measure, which maintains rent restrictions on an as-is basis for three months beyond the present expiration date, was sent to the White House for the President's signature.

Senator John H. Overton (D., La.) did not rise to object when Senator C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, proposed that the Senate accept the House-approved bill. Several days ago the Senate added an Overton amendment to the rent control bill providing safeguards for subtenants here. However, the House refused to accept the amendment.

1 of 4 Bills Passed

Three other District bills were passed by the Senate yesterday. These bills differ from legislation on the same subjects already approved by the House and therefore must be ironed out by Senate-House conference committees. The measures okayed by the Senate yesterday are as follows:

Establishment of an alcoholic clinic here. The Senate would raise the operating funds through a 10 per cent increase in liquor license fees, expected to raise $75,000 a year. The House would take up to $100,000 from the District general fund for the clinic.

Regulation of undertakers and embalmers here. The Senate and House versions differ only in minor details.

Revision of procedure in the Recorder of Deeds Office. The Senate bill authorizes photostating of documents in place of typed copies now required. The House bill goes much further, revamping organization as well as procedure.

Accepted in Effect

Senate-House conferees met late yesterday afternoon on the Recorder of Deeds legislation, and in effect accepted the Senate version.

Both Senate and House yesterday approved a conference report on the independent offices appropriations bill, which provides $75,000 for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission in preparing a long-range slum clearance program here.

The approved legislation, which was sent to the White House, also includes $1,700,000 for starting the proposed District hospital center, and $850,000 for the beginning of a national institute of mental health at Bethesda.

Police Inquiry Hopes Dashed By Johnston

S. C. Senator Blocks Consent Move; Langer Now Favors Probe

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) decided yesterday "it's best for the District citizens" not to have a Senate investigation of Washington police now.

His objections to the resolution practically killed all hope for the investigation when its sponsors asked unanimous consent for passage of the measure.

Earlier, Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) withdrew his disapproval which blocked passage Wednesday. Langer explained he had "been misinformed."

Finds Reporters Right

"I was told Police Superintendent Barrett's appointment was approved by the Senate District Committee, so I couldn't see any point in investigating him. You reporters told me it wasn't so; that Commissioner (John Russell) Young appointed him without approval of the Senate. Well, I checked it up and found you were right and I had been misinformed."

Immediately after Langer made known his decision, Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), one of its three sponsors, asked again for unanimous approval of the resolution. Johnston, who remained silent Wednesday, asked that it be put "over" for further consideration.

Later, he explained to reporters:

"Wait until next January. I might change my mind. Right now we'd be throwing money down a rat hole. Give Barrett time to settle down.

"Best for Citizens"

"I'm taking this position because it's best for the District citizens. I'm looking out for their interests. I think it is to the best interests of the citizens to give him time to cool off, settle down and think it over."

Johnston came to the Senate floor armed with material furnished by Police Chief Barrett to refute arguments that the detective bureau had been hiding crime complaints made by District residents and visitors at a time when Barrett

Sailor Is Held In Slaying of Officer's Wife

Evidence in Cabin Killing in Maryland All Circumstantial

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Leonardtown, Md., July 24.—A 22-year-old sailor was held here today in the slaying of a Navy lieutenant's wife whose nude, bludgeoned body was found in a resort cabin at Tall Timbers, 15 miles southeast of here.

The sailor, Joseph Daniel Brouillette, attached to the nearby Naval Air Test Center at Cedar Point, on the Patuxent River, was arrested at 9 p. m. Wednesday in his barracks and turned over to civil authorities.

His arrest came within four hours after the body of Mrs. Julia Katona, 35, wife of Lieut. Frank Katona and mother of 8-year-old twins, was found sprawled in the ramshackle cabin 25 yards from her home. The one-room cabin, used to store fishing equipment, is one of a number built in a grove of tall pine trees. The murder cabin was named, in a crudely painted sign: "Bachler Hall—Nowimenaloud."

Found by Husband

Mrs. Katona's body was found by her husband, who went to search for her after he returned from a 24-hour duty assignment at the air station. The twins, Barry and Bonnie Joy, told their father they had cooked their own meals after she failed to come home.

Katona said when he arrived home "Barry was crying. He told me 'mommy hasn't been home all night.' I don't know why," he said, "but I was immediately attracted to the cabin. I went into it and found Julia there.

"It looked as if there had been a terrific struggle, because bottles that had been used as candleholders were thrown around on the floor and playing cards were strewn around the place.

Happy As Two Kids

'Worst Drunken Driving Case' Gets 2 Years in Rockville Court

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

A two-year jail sentence for driving while drunk, one of the stiffest ever handed down in Rockville Police Court, was given a 32-year-old Brookeville, Md., resident yesterday by Judge Albert Y. Barbee.

Ray

"Your's is the worst driving case I have ever had the displeasure of hearing," Judge Barbee told John W. Ray, before imposing sentence.

"Revoking your permit apparently doesn't keep you from driving," the judge said, adding: "The only way to keep you from driving while drunk is to lock you up."

Ray was found guilty on charges of driving while drunk, reckless driving and driving on a revoked permit. A charge of driving without a registration card was dismissed.

On the driving-drunk charge Ray was sentenced to two years in the Maryland House of Corrections, the maximum sentence. For driving on a revoked permit, he was given six months, and on the reckless driving charge was fined $25. The jail sentences are to run concurrently, the judge said.

The charges grew out of a head-on collision June 8 on Route 240, near Derwood, Md., in which four persons including Ray were injured. One of the victims who suffered two broken arms and two broken legs is still in the hospital.

In 1935, Ray was convicted of drunk driving and sentenced to six months in the House of Corrections. In 1938 and again in 1946 he was convicted of similar charges and again sentenced serving a total of 18 months for the three offenses.

Hughes Probe Turns to Krug, Elliott Links

Full Committee to See Millionaire's Papers In Contract Inquiry

By The Associated Press

Members of the Senate War Investigating Committee will study evidence tomorrow to see whether Elliott Roosevelt, Secretary of the Interior Krug and others had any connection with the 40-million-dollar wartime plane contract awarded Howard Hughes, Hollywood millionaire.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of a subcommittee which gathered the evidence, said yesterday he will lay it before the full committee. He told a reporter it includes sworn testimony by John Meyer, former vice president in charge of public relations for some of Hughes' enterprises, as well as documents from Meyer's and Hughes' files.

Another committee member who asked not to be quoted by name said these documents relate to the obtaining of entertainers for lavish Hollywood parties. This member said the full committee may be called upon to decide whether all of Myer's testimony at a closed session should be spread on the record.

Ferguson, whose subcommittee begins hearings Monday, said he doubts the group will want to limit the scope of the inquiry. However, he said he doesn't believe the investigation will live up to "advance billing" given it in some

Activity Held Boycott Move By Judge Laws

The first Washington test of the Taft-Hartley bill began yesterday when the District Court stopped a "Conga" picket line in front of the Arthur Murray Dance Studios here.

Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws signed a temporary restraining order against the pickets. They are prohibited from interfering with or causing a boycott of the studio, located at 1106 Connecticut ave. nw.

At 6:20 pm., the picket line of 13 Conga dancers came to a halt when Deputy United States Marshal Edward J. Roach broke into the line and served two pickets with a copy of Justice Laws order.

The pickets who had until then been dancing the Conga and singing a ditty, went into a huddle and decided to call their lawyers. They stopped picketing.

The ditty went:

"One-two-three kick
Arthur Murray sign quick
Two, four, six, eight,
Arthur Murray arbitrate;
Three, five, seven, nine,
Murray sign on dotted line."

Investigated in New York

The picket line began here Tuesday when three dance instructors arrived from New York where the Arthur Murray studio there is in the midst of a strike. The 10 additional picket-dancers yesterday were members of CIO unions here.

They awkwardly went through Conga routines under the direction of the three instructors.

The court order banning the line was issued under authority of a section of the Taft-Hartley Labor-Management Act banning picketing in the nature of a secondary boycott.

The restraining order is valid for five days. By that time, the pickets and the United Office and Professional Workers are to come in court and answer the injunction suit. The action was filed in the name of Mrs. Ethel M. Gomez, who manages the studio.

In addition to the injunction, the suit filed by the law firm of Posner, Berge, Fox and Arent, asks $50,000 damages.

Justice Laws, in his order, said that unless the order were issued,

180 in Mine Escape Blast Trapping 12

Illinois Explosion Kills One and Sends Seven to Hospitals

West Frankfort, Ill., July 24 (AP).—An underground explosion shook the Old Ben coal mine No. 8 today with an estimated 200 miners underground, and several hours later one miner was known dead, seven were hospitalized and 12 were reported still trapped.

The trapped men—in telephone communication with rescue workers at the surface — said raging flames were blocking their escape, Assistant Fire Chief Leslie Rose reported. Rose said communication was good.

Most of the miners escaped through an air vent after the explosion and fire occurred about 2:30 p. m. (CST).

Spark Ignited Dust

William W. Lamont, manager of the United Mine Workers hospital said the injured miners, four of whom were in critical condition, told him dust ignited by a spark from a motor caused the explosion and fire. The men were burned and also suffered fractures and abrasions from the concussion.

Mine Superintendent R. L. Adams said the entire day shift of about 200 was inside the 500-foot-deep mine when the blast occurred and that about 20 men were working in the immediate vicinity of the explosion.

One of them, J. E. Stevens, was dead when he was removed from the mine and a survey of hospitals showed that seven others had been hospitalized with burns and other injuries.

Reports on the number still unaccounted for varied, but mine officials said about 12 were known to be missing.

Sees No Chance for Others

Eddie Franco, an official of the local United Mine Workers unit, expressed the opinion that Stevens died of suffocation and added "there doesn't appear to be any chance for the others still trapped."

"Rescue workers have encountered several rock falls," Franco said.

The trapped men were believed to be in an entry way off the main shaft.

The Gallup Poll

Sample Survey Finds Nation 4 to 1 for Peacetime Training

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 24.—As Congress prepares to adjourn, two major pieces of business that have wide public support remain unfinished.

One is legislation to raise minimum wages. The other is the peacetime military training bill.

If the country were to vote today in an official referendum on peacetime military training, the results would be as follows on the basis of the estimated 61 million eligible voters at the time of the last presidential election:

45,700,000 voters in favor.
4,300,000 not voting.

That reflects the results of the latest institute survey on military training—an unofficial sampling referendum among the voters in all 48 States. A cross-section, scientifically selected to represent all walks of life, was interviewed on the following:

In the future, do you think every physically-fit young man (who has not already been in the armed forces) should be required to take military or naval training for one year?

The vote:

Yes	75%
No	18
No opinion	7

Experience has shown that sampling referendums such as this are subject to error that rarely exceeds 3 to 4 percentage points.

If a national referendum had been held on the military training issue at any period in the last 4½ years, it would have resulted in a vote something like 2 to 1 in favor. Twelve surveys by the institute since December, 1942, have found that only twice has the percentage in favor been as low as 63 per cent, with the average around 70 per cent.

These poll results form a substantial body of evidence to illustrate the general unreliability of letters to Congressmen as an index of public opinion.

Congressmen and Senators have received many letters opposing military training, just as they did in 1940 when the selective service bill was pending. In the summer of 1940, 14 Senators alone received 30,000 letters on the selective service bill. An analysis published in the Public Opinion Quarterly showed that 90 per cent of those letters were against the bill, 10 per cent in favor—or a ratio of 9 to 1 against selective service.

But when polls were conducted among a scientific cross-section of the population by the institute, it was found that 68 per cent were in favor of the bill, while 27 per cent were opposed and 5 per cent had no opinion.

In short, Congress in 1940 was hearing almost entirely from the 27 per cent who opposed the bill, and today it is hearing from the 18 per cent who oppose peacetime military training.

(The Washington Post Poll found, in June of this year, that 76 per cent of Washingtonians favored universal military training during peacetime. Only 20 per cent of local residents expressed

Patterson, Leaving Cabinet, Cautions Nation on Security

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Robert P. Patterson stepped down as Secretary of War yesterday with a word of advice and caution to the country on means of preserving its security.

It was his first press conference as a private citizen and his last in the vast Pentagon where he had held so many in the past seven years. Shortly before, Kenneth C. Royal was sworn in as his successor.

Among other things, Patterson said:

The United States "certainly should" continue to manufacture the atomic bomb until effective international control has been worked out.

In view of the increased power and range of weapons, means for defending the interior of the country must be considered. Studies of this subject have been made.

New weapons have not yet changed concepts of land warfare; those of World War II are still valid.

Universal military training should be adopted as an essential part of any over-all plan of military security.

In addition to UMT, Patterson indorsed as "vital" the balance of a five-point program proposed for an effective defense by the Compton Board on Universal Training. These, he said, were:

Scientific research and development.

Adequate military intelligence.

Industrial planning; that is, planning for industrial mobilization.

A strong standing force ready to act, with emphasis on the air branch.

A strong, healthy and educated population.

He pointed out that the United States now can count among its resources:

"A large population of vigorous

Filibuster Threat May Spoil Plans; GOP Chiefs Work On Recall Proposal

Post Reporter

Filibuster threats held the Senate in session last night while Republican leaders drove doggedly toward the goal of adjournment of Congress tomorrow.

GOP leaders are working on a plan to adjourn Congress subject to recall by them as well as by President Truman.

The adjournment resolution will stipulate that Congress can be called back into session by the Speaker of the House, the presiding officer of the Senate and the Republican floor leaders of the two chambers.

During the war period, Congress retained the authority for leaders of either party to call a special session.

The tense international situation was believed to be the cause of reluctance to adjourn without the ability of Congress to call its own special session.

Taft Charges Filibuster

Unless a special session is called by the President or the GOP leadership, the Eightieth Congress will not meet again until January 6.

In a heated floor exchange late last night Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) of the GOP policy committee angrily accused the Democrats of using the filibuster and every other tactic in their power to prevent action on the Kem resolution to investigate the Justice Department's conduct of the Kansas City inquiry.

Taft said he was prepared to keep the Senate in session all night if necessary to force a vote.

The GOP leader's statement came in response to a motion by Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) to postpone action on the Kem resolution until January.

Similarly on the House side yesterday, Minority Leader Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) said he would force postponement of adjournment two weeks unless he was assured no House move would be made to press the inquiry on that side. House Republican leaders privately conceded defeat.

Pile of Work Remains

Congress has still a mountain of work and literally billions of dollars to appropriate to run the Government before it can get away tomorrow.

At a late hour last night, chances of Saturday adjournment appeared none too favorable despite the announcement by Senate Republican Whip Kenneth Wherry that the Senate would remain in session all night to clean up unfinished business.

Removal Urged Of All Excess Russians in U. S.

By The Associated Press

Turned down by the Soviet government on a trip to Russia, a House Labor Subcommittee today urged "immediate removal of all excess Russian nationals" from the United States.

Representative Kersten (R., Wis.), subcommittee chairman, proposed this step to Secretary of State Marshall.

In addition, he asked in a letter that the Secretary "adopt a strictly reciprocal policy toward Soviet nationals and authorize the residence in this country of only that number of Russian nationals as is permitted to citizens of the United States in the Soviet Union."

Kersten and Representatives Owens (R., Ill.) and Kennedy (D., Mass.) were named to a subcommittee to visit Russia in September to study education and labor conditions there.

The State Department approved, Kersten said, and provided passports. He added that he saw Soviet Ambassador Nikolai V. Novikov July 2 to apply for visas.

On July 19, he got a letter from Yuri Bruslov, chief of the consular division of the embassy, turning down the trip.

Congress Freezes 1% Payroll Tax

Present Rate to Remain Until 1950, Then Increase to 2 Per Cent by 1952

By The Associated Press

Legislation freezing the social security payroll tax at 1 per cent for another two years was rushed through Congress yesterday, preventing a threatened 2-billion-dollar increase in the tax in 1948.

The measure now goes to the White House for President Truman's signature.

The House and the Senate passed the bill quickly after conferees broke a deadlock on major differences in separate measures passed by the two chambers. Without the compromise the tax automatically would have increased January 1.

The tax is imposed to pay old age and survivors' insurance. The rate is now 1 per cent on employes' wages and 1 per cent on employers' payrolls. It brings in about $1,500,000,000 annually.

Existing law calls for the rate to go up to 2.5 per cent January 1, 1948, a total increase of about two billion dollars.

The legislation agreed upon today prevents this increase for two years, but provides for stepping up the rate to 1.5 per cent in 1950 and to 2 per cent in 1952. It would then remain at that level.

The Social Security Law, enacted 10 years ago, provided for automatic increase in the levy over a span of years, until it reached 3 per cent each against employer and employe. However, Congress has repeatedly frozen the rate at 1 per cent.

Representative Reed (R., N. Y.) managing the legislation, said that after two years it would be necessary to let the tax go up to take care of added burdens on the security fund due to the accumulated benefits being built up under the old age and survivors insurance.

The House and Senate previously had approved a two-year freeze, but a deadlock developed because the House bill provided for an increase in 1950 to 1 5 per cent and in 1957 to 2 per cent. The Senate approved a simple two-year freeze.

Earlier efforts to compromise the conflict had failed. The Senate yesterday accepted the House security tax formula, except that the 2 per cent rate would begin in 1952 instead of 1957 as the House originally provided.

The legislation also continues the increased Federal contributions, approved last year, for Federal-State benefits to needy aged persons, the blind, and dependent children.

Further Tax Action Unlikely

Meanwhile Chairman Knutson (R., Minn.) of the House Ways and Means Committee said last night "it is highly improbable" Republicans will make another effort to reduce taxes before next year's presidential election.

For, he said, "it is clear to me now as it has been for some time that the President will not approve any tax reduction bill that is not basically political."

Knutson said in a speech for the radio that the people would have to look for tax relief, not to a Democratic Administration, but "to a Republican President and a Republican Administration."

2 Former GIs Indicted in Theft Of A-Bomb Secrets

Santa Fe, N. Mex., July 24 (AP).—Two former GIs were indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges involving atomic bomb secrets.

Two indictments, each containing two counts, named Alexander von der Luft, 23-year-old Princeton undergraduate of Lebanon, Pa., and Earnest D. Wallis, 34, Chicago photographer.

The indictments charged each with stealing and purloining property of the United States and removing and concealing public records.

The two were arrested by the FBI on July 14 and are at liberty on $10,000 bonds after hearings before U. S. commissioners in Pittsburgh and Chicago.

All of the papers and photographs have been recovered, the FBI said.

Announcements by the FBI and members of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee described the former GIs as souvenir hunters and insisted the secrets they are charged with possessing did not get into unauthorized hands.

quarters as an expose of Hollywood night life.

"We are interested in what happened to the Government's 40 million dollars, which was spent without producing a usable wartime plane," he told a reporter. "These other matters are a side issue, except as they involve money that the Government might otherwise have collected as taxes."

Hughes and Henry J. Kaiser, wartime ship builder, obtained a contract, reputedly over Army and Navy protests, to construct plywood planes. Later this was replaced with a contract for Hughes to build a photographic-reconnaissance plane, in the prototype of which the millionaire flier crashed several months ago.

Charges White House Pressure

Ferguson has charged that White House "pressure" made it possible for Hughes and Kaiser to get the contract. The committee has subpened records of the late President Roosevelt in what some members said is an attempt to link Elliott Roosevelt with the order which gave the business to his friend, Hughes.

Krug told reporters he had informed Ferguson, Chairman Brewster (R., Me.) of the full committee and Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.) at an informal conference that Kaiser had "put the heat of hell on everybody in Washington" to obtain a wartime plane contract.

Krug declared the Kaiser-Hughes contract was let before he became chairman of the War Production Board in August, 1944. He said all he could tell the committee members about the contract was "hearsay."

"What was that? a reporter asked.

Lined Up Hughes

"I said that Kaiser put the heat of hell on everybody in Washington," the Cabinet member replied. "Initially they told him he couldn't have an airplane contract because he had no aircraft man. He lined up Hughes and came back and said that now he had an aircraft man. Then he got the contract."

Krug declined to comment on reports that he had attended Hollywood parties arranged by Hughes. Friends said he had told them that he never was at a party at which Hughes was present.

The committee was said by a member to have in its possession records showing that Krug was friendly with Meyer with indications that he attended social affairs arranged by the latter.

This same member said the committee had found that as chairman of the WPB, Krug had signed an order making $1,500,000 available to continue the Hughes contract.

Business, Says Kaiser

Oakland, Calif., July 24 (U.P.).—Industrialist Henry J. Kaiser said today his partnership with Howard Hughes in a wartime aircraft building business now under congressional criticism was "purely business."

He denied knowing anything about the Hollywood producer's film business or any of the alleged "softening up" parties Hughes threw with starlets as guests during Government contract negotiations.

Kaiser said he was going to Washington next Tuesday and "really tell the story" of what happened to the cargo planes that never showed up under a 40 million dollar contract.

Kaiser blamed the Government itself for failure of the cargo plane program.

"The Government agreed to furnish engines and accessories for the engines and never did until after the war as far as I know," he said.

As for Hughes, Kaiser added:

"He is a hard person to contact. In all our relations, I have not seen him more than 12 times."

Kaiser said he knew of no connection between Elliott Roosevelt, son of the late President, and the enterprise.

"I can't ever recall having met him," Kaiser said.

Openly rankled by Secretary of Interior Krug's statements that he had turned on the heat for the 40 million dollar aircraft contract, Kaiser declared it was the American people and the press who "put the heat of hell on everybody in Washington to do something about cargo plane production."

Light Quake Felt In Los Angeles

Los Angeles, July 24 (U.P.).—A light earthquake rocked southern California at 2:12 p. m. PST (6:12 p. m. EDT) today, the second shock in the area in less than 15 hours. The temblor was felt throughout communities surrounding Los Angeles but there were no reports of damage.

Treasury Eyes Petrillo Taxes, May Tax His Tax Payments

By The Associated Press

Representative Kearns (R., Pa.) said yesterday the Treasury Department is studying the income taxes of James C. Petrillo, president of the AFL Musicians Union.

Kearns told a reporter the department has asked for a transcript of testimony before a House Labor subcommittee July 7 in which Petrillo discussed his income and taxes.

A department spokesman said it would be "the most normal thing in the world" for the Internal Revenue Bureau to get the testimony, since it is the bureau's business to follow up any tax leads.

But he said the department has an ironclad policy of never saying whether it is or isn't checking on anyone's income taxes.

Kearns is chairman of the Labor subcommittee investigating some of Petrillo's activities. On July 7 Petrillo told the subcommittee he gets $46,000 a year in salary and $13,000 in expenses, plus a new automobile whenever he wants it and payment of his income tax by the Chicago local of the Musicians Union.

The Treasury says there is nothing illegal about the union's paying the boss' tax. What the Internal Revenue collectors would be interested in is whether the Government got all the taxes it had coming to it.

Department experts say that money the union pays as tax represents income to Petrillo, and the resultant higher income means a correspondingly higher tax, so that the whole thing pyramids to sizable proportions.

They figured that an average tax on a $46,000 income would be around $20,000. But if the union paid that tax, the income would then be $66,000—and the tax on that figure would be bigger.

Kearns said he had heard Petrillo's gross income before taxes would have to be around $205,000 to net him as much as he reported to the subcommittee.

Czech Trade Accord Sought by U. S., Britain

Berlin, July 24 (AP).—A delegation of United States and British military government representatives left Berlin by plane today for Prague to seek a trade agreement between Czechoslovakia and the combined Anglo-American zones of Germany.

Although Czechoslovakia declined an invitation to the Marshall Plan conferences in Paris, reportedly under Soviet pressure, she has a trade agreement with the United States zone and it is planned to expand this for bizonal function. The Czechs have been especially eager to buy German machine parts and machine tools.

Colombian Communists Split Into Two Parties

Bucaramanga, Colombia, July 24 (U.P.).—The national convention of the Communist Party ended today in the complete splitting of the party.

One faction, headed by Gilberto Vieira, will retain the old name of Colombia Communist Party, while the other, headed by Augusto Duran, will be known as the Communist Labor Party. Both groups "expelled" each other from the convention and then held meetings in separate buildings. Each announced that it will found a newspaper in Bogota to defend its theories.

Police Believe Woman Slain By Sailors

Baltimore, July 24 (AP).—Police combed waterfront haunts frequently by sailors today hoping they could find clues which would help them solve the mystery of the woman with the light brown hair whose trussed body was found floating in the harbor.

Capt. George Hohman and Lieut. Carroll Simmons of the Baltimore County Police indicated they are almost certain it was the work of sailors. They theorized that the woman may have been mauled abroad a ship and thrown overboard.

Dr. George Merrill, deputy medical examiner, reported the body had been in the water from two to eight weeks. The woman was about 32, he said, and "must have been pretty".

The medical examiner found her jaw broken in several places and other evidences she had been terribly beaten about the head. But he reasoned she actually died of drowning after being put in the water inside a roll of canvas weighted down with iron pigs.

The body was found yesterday after it was floated to the surface by cases generated inside the wrappings. It was tied round and round with cords and ropes.

Thomas Clough, veteran boatswain, inspected the weights and wrappings and told the investigators:

1. The canvas is the type used to cover ship hatches.
2. The pig-iron weights are the type used for ballast on ships before metal became short during the war.
3. Part of the bindings are regular halyard cord, part are lifeboat lashings, and part are a substitute for manila hemp widely used on ships during the war.
4. The knots are regular marine clove hitches tied by a right-handed man in a hurry.

Hohman and Simmons reasoned that no landlubber would have all the sea-going materials handy or would have tied that kind of knots.

County police took imprints from the woman's fingers today and sent them to the FBI laboratories in Washington. Hohman and Simmons hoped they would match some set on file there. They pointed out the files contain prints of all workers who were employed in war plants.

night "we do not have much evidence."

Investigation disclosed that Mrs. Katona had been in on a six-handed, penny-ante poker game in the murder cabin with Brouillette, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Colasanto, 1103 Russell rd., Alexandria; Al Peyton, 1901 G st. nw., and Mrs. Betty Hubbard of Tall Timbers.

They said Brouillette and Mrs. Katona remained in the cabin after the game broke up at 11:30 p. m. Tuesday. Camalier said Brouillette, subjected to five hours of questioning after his arrest, said he had been drinking heavily and remembered being in the cabin. Camalier quoted him as saying he didn't remember scuffling with Mrs. Katona and couldn't remember how her body became unclothed.

She was clad only in shoes and stockings and her clothing was scattered on the floor. Her head was badly bruised and death apparently was due to strangulation, according to St. Mary's County Medical Examiner, Dr. Frank F. Greenwell—"probably with the bare hands."

Reported Incoherent

Brouillette appeared "quite nervous" during questioning and when visited by a Navy chaplain early today was "incoherent." He asked for the chaplain and asked him to return tomorrow, authorities said.

Camalier said Brouillette was linked with the crime by a Navy ring found on the scene, but ownership of the ring has not been admitted by the suspect.

Neighbors reported they heard no noise of a scuffle.

Brouillette had been on a liberty pass from the station and had been staying at the cabin of George D. Sterner, five doors from the murder scene. He checked back into his barracks at 9 a. m. Wednesday, Naval authorities said.

The warrant on which he was arrested was presented to Lieut. Comdr. Jose E. Kirby, intelligence officer and was sworn out by Trial Magistrate J. Ralph Abell, of Leonardtown. Brouillette was turned over to State Trooper George Sanger, of the Waldorf substation.

The suspect, whose home is in Manchester, N. H., was on his second term of enlistment and served in the Atlantic and Pacific during the war. Naval authorities said his service record was "average" and that he had received an honorable discharge March 8, 1946 and reenlisted the following day.

Mrs. Katona was born in New York and worked for the National Broadcasting Co. as a traffic engineer for 10 years. She was married 11 years ago. Katona is a veteran of 18½ years with the Navy and rose through the ranks to his commissioning in 1942.

Mrs. Katona's body was taken to the Robinson funeral home here, but funeral services have not been arranged.

was chief of detectives. The Washington Post found he had hidden 600 robbery complaints in 11 months of 1946 and 1947.

The list, Johnston said, contains the names of "phony" complaints made during July. He was asked if he had taken the trouble to find out the approved FBI handling of crime complaints suspected of being false.

"No," he said.

Did he know that the FBI required all crimes, real or false, be reported and that corrections were to be made later?

"No," he replied.

Johnston was the only Senator present when Barrett was sworn in as Police Superintendent July 1 in the office of Commissioner Young.

Barrett yesterday announced he had sent Inspectors Floyd A. Truscott and John Fowler to check police handling of "methods used in handling crime" complaints in Baltimore, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Jersey City and New York City. They returned yesterday but had not yet furnished a report.

Couple Sought In Tavern Slaying Of Ship Captain

Baltimore, July 24 (AP).—Police seeking the slayer of Harry A. Anderson, 33-year-old merchant ship captain, were working with the descriptions of a man and woman seen arguing with him in a tavern early today.

Police Lieut. George Galkas said Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson told him her husband whispered to her just before he died in a hospital several hours later that he did not know the man who shot him.

Lieut. Thomas J. Mooney said two Coast Guardsmen who saw the fight which preceded the shooting gave him descriptions of the man and woman who had argued with Anderson.

6 Killed, 14 Injured

Calcutta, India, July 24 (U.P.).—Six persons were killed and 14 injured today when police fired into a crowd of 5000 coal workers attacking a power plant at Loyabad in Joharia disrict of Bihar Province.

Police previously had used tear gas but the crowd broke through police lines.

3 Men Held For Robbery

Three District men were held for action of a Prince Georges County grand jury at Hyattsville yesterday in connection with the robbery of Mr. and Mrs. Spruce A. Baird of Mt. Rainier on July 9.

The men, all of whom pleaded not guilty to the charge of armed robbery before Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie, are Robert E. Brinn, 22, and George C. Neal, 22, both of 1442 Harvard st. nw. and John A. Mullen, 29, 2000 D st. ne.

Bond for Brinn and Neal, who police say have admitted participating in the robbery, was set at $10,000, while Judge Bowie set Mullen's bond at $500. Mullen has denied participating in the robbery, but has admitted he helped dispose of some of the jewelry

The $10,000 bond for Brinn and Neal was set at the recommendation of Assistant State's Attorney Hervey Machen, who said he did not believe it excessive in view of the fact that more than $5000 of about $6650 worth of jewelry stolen still has not been recovered.

Congress Toils To End Session

fraud case, a group of Senate Republicans planned to put up a last-ditch battle during the night.

The solid Democratic opposition meanwhile appeared determined to filibuster long beyond the date set for adjournment.

Another pointed hint of "prolonged discussion" was thrown out by Senator Carl Hatch (D., N. Mex.) when Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) blocked consideration of the Mundt bill to authorize the "Voice of America" program.

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) introduced a resolution which would give Congress $100,000 to investigate the program during the adjournment.

One Senate leader indicated he believed the Smith resolution would pass before adjournment.

Before Congress can adjourn it must take final action on six more money bills.

In an initial burst of speed which slowed up toward night, Congress wrapped up several major bills for delivery to President Truman.

The House and Senate with little debate wound up action on:

1. The $8,189,122,927 independent officers appropriation bill—biggest single spending program for this fiscal year ending next June 30. Most of the money—$6,964,457,080 was earmarked for the vast array of GI benefit programs operated by the Veterans' Administration. The Atomic Energy Commission was alloted 175 million dollars which was 75 million less than Chairman David E. Lilienthal requested.

2. Also to the White House went a supplemental supply measure granting $35,500,000 for the National Housing Agency's veterans' housing program.

3. A bill freezing the Social Security tax on employers and employes at one per cent each throughout 1949 also saw final action.

As evidence of its desire to get away tomorrow, the Senate last night overrode Republican demands for a 100-million-dollar slash in a 452-million-dollar money bill for flood control, navigation, hydroelectric and other water projects.

Action came by a thumping 78-to-5 vote despite a plea from Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) of the Senate Appropriations Committee to defeat the bill.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) called it "a pork-barrel bill," and Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) urged the Senate to recommit it.

The bill must still go to conference, however, where it is sure to face a rough going over by the even more economy-minded conferees from the House. The Senate greatly increased the measure over House figures after President Truman urged increased expenditures for flood control work in the Mississippi basin.

Senate-House conferees agreed last night upon a $5,934,000,000 military supply bill for the Army for 1948. This included $5,480,000,000 in cash appropriations and $454,000,000 in contract authorizations. The total was only 16 million dollars less than the Army requested.

The bill will go to the House and the Senate for final action today.

Cleaning up its own slate, the House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate the Independent Offices conference report totalling $8,189,000,000.

The House Appropriations Committee sent to the House floor a new supplemental appropriation bill of $100,058,500, including $8,400,000 for flood control, and slashed by 75 per cent funds President Truman requested to check the loyalty of Government workers. Acting under unanimous consent th eHouse immediately passed the bill and sent it to the Senate.

Final action must still be taken on the $960,044,908 supply measure for the Agriculture Department.

Under the House-passed second supplemental bill $500,000—less than half the amount sought by some House Republicans—would be allotted to a Congressional committee for a study of Government administration expected to be directed by former President Herbert Hoover.

The Agriculture conference report has lopped from $198,526,510 from President Truman's budget request.

Dugan to See Tuck On Rent Control

Daniel A. Dugan, Arlington County Board member, will confer with Virginia Gov. William Tuck on the county's rent control at an unspecified future date.

In a letter to the State executive yesterday, Dugan accepted the invitation to confer, and urged Tuck to limit the number of real estate representatives on State regional rent boards to two.

Tuck earlier had written to Harley M. Williams, chairman of the Arlington Better Government League: "It is my desire to name (rent) board members who will not represent any particular class, but who will be fair and will look out for the best interests of all."

Greece Issues Warrants for 2 Communists

Athens, July 24 (AP).—Government prosecution officials tonight issued warrants for the arrest of Nicholas Zachariades, leader of the Greek Communist Party, and Miltiades Porphyrogennis, former labor minister, accusing them of an alleged Communist plot to start an uprising in Greece and "anti-national" activities."

Issuance of the warrants was the first legal action taken against the Communists since leftist guerilla armies launched a series of major attacks against cities and towns in northern Greece two weeks ago.

Porphyrogennis, in a recent speech to French Communists at Strasbourg, advocated the creation of a "free" Greek government.

U. N. Hopes Fade

Lake Success, July 24 (AP).—Hopes for a compromise solution of the Balkan problem faded today when Russia turned down French proposals intended to "soften" the American plan for a powerful semi-permanent commission in the Balkans.

Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko, breaking his silence after hours of debate by other delegates on various amendments before the Security Council, declared that Russia's opposition to the United States resolution would remain unchanged regardless of what happened to the French proopsals.

He told the Council that none of the amendments changed the substance of the American plan which he already had declared to be "unacceptable" to Russia. Gromyko made no reference to a series of British amendments which were discussed this morning.

The Soviet attitude was disclosed after the delegates had left unresolved a new difficulty raised by a French proposal that the Big Five powers be excluded from the proposed Balkan commission.

The proposal was strongly opposed by the United States, China and Britain which insisted that each of the 11 members of the Security Council should be represented on the commission designed to set up a semi-permanent watch over the disturbed area.

'Neutral' Unit Proposed

French delegate Alexandre Parodi suggested that the commission should be limited to a smaller "neutral" group of seven countries—the six non-permanent members of the Security Council and possibly Sweden.

Hershel V. Johnson, Deputy U. S. representative, objected, however, that the same political differences would exist among a small group as a larger body such as the United States proposed.

"We believe a commission representing all the members of the Council would more fully represent the moral as well as the legal weight of the council toward the maintenance of international peace."

Johnson proposed that a vote on the composition of the commission be deferred until tomorrow.

The Council received an interim report from the subsidiary group of the Balkan Investigating Commission on recent developments along Greece's northern border. The report was restricted to a summary of testimony taken in its on-the-spot investigation of Greek charges that an international brigade hade entered Greece from Albania.

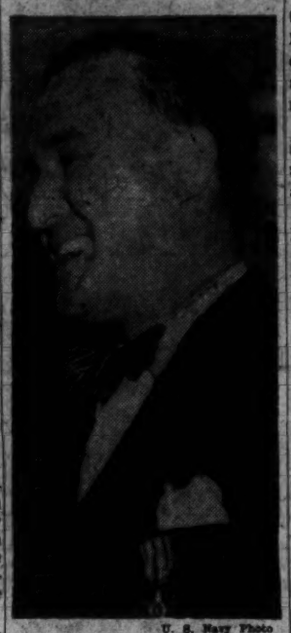
Although all the witnesses testified that large guerilla bands had entered Greece from Albania, there was no direct testimony that an international brigade was involved.

Hitler's Chancellery Makes Red Memorial

Berlin, July 24 (AP).—Parts of the pink marble chancellery in which Adolf Hitler worked are being recreated into memorials to Josef Stalin and the Russian army.

German workmen were digging out the slabs of Bavarian marble, granite walls, columns and mosaic floors today and carting them, under Russian direction, to two Soviet cemeteries. There the pieces will be fashioned into two 260-foot obelisks.

Congress Member Gets Medal



U. S. Navy Photo

REP. EDWARD A. MITCHELL, Republican, of Evansville, Ind., yesterday received the Navy's Silver Star Medol for "conspicuous gallantry as commanding officer of an assault unit in action against Japanese forces on Okinawa." Representative Mitchell was commissioned a lieutenant in 1943. He is now a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve

Soviet Plan to Partition Austria Feared by U. S. Officials

Vienna, July 24 (AP).—Authoritative American quarters fear that Russia may demand the partition of Austria as the price of signing an Austrian peace treaty, it was made known today.

What disposition Russia might seek of her eastern occupation zone was not specified. However, a high American official said:

"It appears highly unlikely that Russia will ever agree to sign a treaty with an independent Austria which includes the country's prewar borders."

Russian officials have made no suggestion so far for partition and seem willing to continue the seemingly endless four-power negotiations for a treaty which have been going on here for weeks.

All the time, the Austrian Communist Party is trying to find some way to dominate Parliament, though it was repudiated in the November, 1945, election and holds only five seats in a 165-seat chamber.

So far the Communist maneuvers have resulted in conspicuous failure. But the State Department in Washington has been informed that there may be another attempt at a political coup next month. The last one failed dismally when, the government refused to give the Communists greater representation in the cabinet. The Communists now hold one portfolio—electrification.

If, as expected, future Communists' moves fail, American officials believe Russia will support a proposal by Austrian Communists for severance of the present Soviet occupation zone from the remainder of the country.

This belief is due partly to a conviction that Russia's counter-Marshall Plan in eastern Europe can not fully succeed unless anti-Communist eastern Austria is included in the Russian sphere of influence.

Stalin Promises to Free PWs

Vienna, July 24 (AP).—A promise that all Austrian prisoners of war now held in Russia would be freed this year was contained in a letter from Soviet Prime Minister Stalin published today in the Communist Party newspaper Volksstimme.

The letter, dated July 21 and addressed to the five Communist members of the Austrian Parliament, was printed across all five columns of the tabloid newspaper under large headlines.

"The Soviet government has decided to speed up the release and transport of Austrian prisoners of war from the U. S. S. R. in such a way as to grant the return of all Austrians by the end of the year. The Austrian government will be informed of the decision," the letter said.

An editorial declared that the communication was "the best news" since the day of Austria's liberation from Germany.

Grain Harvest Takes Soviet Spotlight

Moscow, July 24 (U.P.).—Millions of Russians, actors in a real life drama of world importance, sweated today under a burning summer sun, trying to bring in a record grain harvest after years of war and peacetime drought.

Success means relief from years of anxiety over food, the end of the ration system and the forging of a potent weapon in Russia's international relations.

A big surplus will make Russia again one of the great world grain export countries, and supplies will be available if all goes well for the eastern European countries which, at Russia's behest, are boycotting the Marshall recovery plan.

It is not too much to say that the attention of the entire Soviet Union is centered on the task of harvesting, milling and transporting grain. Special grain trains are speeding past passenger expresses along the nation's railroads. Temporary roads are being run through big collective farms to facilitate movement. Combines, threshers and other harvesting machinery are working throughout the night by searchlight. In Siberia at least entire villages are being mobilized to work in the fields.

Italy Hears Soviet Ready To Ratify Pact

Rome, July 24 (A.P.).—Foreign Minister Carlo Sforza opened an Assembly debate on ratification of the Italian peace treaty today by announcing he had received telegrams which "confirmed the desire of Soviet Russia to ratify" the pact.

Russia is the only one of the big victor powers which has not ratified the pact which the Italian government, after much reluctance, has finally presented to the Assembly for ratification.

Communist, pro-Communist, Socialist and right-wing Qualunquist speakers were expected to oppose ratification. A government motion to consider the treaty passed in the Assembly last night by the narrow margin of 232 to 204.

Sforza termed the treaty "suffocating," but laid great emphasis on hopes for eventual revision of some of its terms and on the necessity of ratification by August 10, by which date he said Italy's chance of becoming a member of the United Nations would be ended for this year.

House Approves Amortization of TVA Debt to U. S.

By The Associated Press

The House approved yesterday legislation under which the Tennessee Valley Authority will be required to repay to the Federal Treasury by 1988 and 348 million dollars invested by the Government in the TVA power system.

The long-debated amortization plan was agreed to in modified form Wednesday by a conference of members of the appropriations committees of both the House and Senate.

Congress' approval of the conference agreement will send to President Truman for approval the $18,700,000 appropriation to operate TVA in the fiscal year ending next June 30.

The conferees agreed to a boost of more than five million dollars over the $13,117,521 fund voted by the Senate for TVA.

The compromise figure is still less than the 27 million dollars proposed in President Truman's budget and the 22 million dollars voted by the House.

Research Is Progressing On Atom, Commons Told

London, July 24 (A.P.).—John Wilmot, minister of supply, told the House of Commons today that research at an atomic energy experimental station at Harwell "is making very good progress indeed."

He said the first experimental pile will be in operation later this year and that the adaptation of a factory at Springfield to produce pure uranium was proceeding smoothly.

Exiles Keep Estonia Alive

Stockholm, Sweden, July 24 (U.P.).—An Estonian "government-in-exile" has been operating in Stockholm for some time and has received financial backing from Estonian organizations and private citizens in the United States, the newspaper Expressen reported today.

The newspaper said that disclosure of the existence of the exile regime was one of the developments in the uncovering of a suspected spy ring, disclosed yesterday.

Russia seized Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania in 1940.

The newspaper Tidningen, which has sources close to the government, said that police regarded the entire "spy ring" matter as a minor one. It was made known that six suspects, reported to be from the Baltic republics, were under arrest.

Man Gets Death In Georgia Slaying

Carrollton, Ga., July 24 (U.P.).—In a crowded courtroom guarded by State Troopers armed with guns and tear gas, an accused Negro murderer was convicted today of slaying a white man and sentenced to be executed. The all-white, 12-man jury deliberated six minutes.

Sixteen State patrol cars guarded streets outside the white marble courthouse during the trial. They were under orders to prevent violence in this small town where the Negro, Eddie Brown, 22, had been saved from a lynch mob on the night of June 30. Judge Samuel J. Boykin pronounced sentence.

Nation Favors Training Plan

opposition and the remaining 4 per cent were undecided.

(In an earlier survey, in November, 1945, The Washington Post Poll recorded an overwhelming majority of 82 per cent of local residents—more than 4 out of every 5—in favor of universal military training. At that time, just after the war's end, 7 per cent more Washingtonians approved the plan than did the country as a whole.)

It was also said in 1940 that President Roosevelt would suffer a great loss in the presidential election of that year because the selective service bill was adopted. Irate mothers were supposed to take it out of the hide of the Democratic Party. But anaiysis of political trends, as shown in impartial polls, fails to show that adoption of selective service had any material effect on the outcome of the 1940 election.

In today's survey a special question was added in order to be able to single out the men and women in the population who have a son or a brother between the ages of 15 and 20.

It was found that such people are as likely to be in favor of peacetime military training as anybody else, in spite of having a blood relative of draft age or soon to be of draft age. The vote for this group was 77 per cent in favor, 19 per cent opposed and 4 per cent without opinion.

Preparedness and protection for the future are the chief reasons given by people in favor of the peacetime draft. Next is a belief that a year's military training is "good discipline" for a young man. Third: people say that in the current difficulties with Russia we should take steps to assure ourselves of sufficient military manpower.

Reasons for Opposition

Those opposed to peacetime training say that it is not necessary, that we should be able to accumulate a force of sufficient size by enlistment. The second objection raised, the poll finds, is that military training makes for war-mongering and war-mindedness. The third is that because of the atom bomb we no longer need big armies, and the fourth objection is that peacetime training disrupts a young man's educational plans.

One thing the survey brings out is that indorsement of peacetime training is uniformly high in all major population groups. There are no striking differences by age, amount of education, geographical section, sex or party.

Certain labor union leaders have opposed the peacetime training bill. But today's survey finds an overwhelming approval of such training among the rank and file of union members questioned in the sample.

The vote by groups follows:

	Yes	No	No Opinion
By age:
21-29	75%	19%	6%
30-49	75	18	7
50 & Over	74	18	8
By sex:
Men	74	20	6
Women	76	16	8
By education:
College	72	23	5
High School	78	17	5
Grade or no school	71	17	12
By party:
Democrats	76	16	8
Republicans	75	20	5
By section:
N. Eng. and Mid. Atl.	74	18	8
E. Cent.	73	20	7
W. Cent	72	20	8
South	80	14	6
Far West	73	20	7

Among labor union members polled, the vote is 75 per cent in favor, 19 per cent opposed and 6 per cent undecided.

British Pursue Refugee Ship to Palestine

Jerusalem, Palestine, July 24 (U.P.).—A Jewish underground broadcast by Haganah said tonight that the illegal immigrant ship Return to Zion with 400 refugees aboard was nearing Palestine but that British warships were following her.

The broadcast raised immediate speculation that the new immigrants may be sent back to their port of origin, possibly either France or Italy, as the 4500 illegal immigrants from the former American ship President Warfield were sent back to France.

The Haganah broadcast coincided with reports that two illegal immigrant ships were approaching Palestine.

Another report said that British troops uncovered a large cache of arms in Tel Aviv during the day, but details were lacking.

Earlier today, five armed bandits, believed to be members of the Jewish underground, robbed the Jerusalem diamond exchange of $40,000 in gems and escaped without a fight.

The exchange office, above a bank building, was cordoned off by another group of gunmen while the bandits scooped up the gems and fled.

The robbery was carried out amid a new wave of underground attacks. One soldier was killed and 14 others injured in seven incidents within the past 24 hours, bringing total security force casualties since July 16 to 7 killed and 62 wounded. Two civilians were killed and 11 wounded in the same period. The underground lost one extremist killed.

Among the underground attacks was an assault on the Palestine-Egypt Railroad south of Gaza last night. Extremists also planted mines on a railroad bridge south of Haifa which royal engineers were unable to remove. The mines were exploded today, partly destroying the bridge.

Thomas Orders Red-Slav Probe Through U. S.

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Chairman Thomas (D., N. Y.) yesterday ordered agents of his House Un-American Activities Committee to hunt down Yugoslav fifth columnists in this country.

Thomas said the fifth columnists were working for Marshall Tito and other Soviet satellite governments. Evidence of this—Thomas claimed—came to the committee in a secret hearing two weeks ago, from Dr. Mladen Giunio-Zorkin.

Giunio-Zorkin, a former Yugoslav army officer and diplomatist, was due to tell his story in public yesterday, but he decided to hold up his appearance until the investigation is made.

CIO Officers Heard

Instead, the committee heard two officers of the Bridgeport (Conn.) local of the CIO United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers. They were:

Michael Berescik, president, who said he thought the Communists would use their power in unions to sabotage any American war effort against Russia or her satelites, and

Joseph Julianelle, business agent, who said 60 or 70 Communists had gotten control of his local, which has 6000 members.

Both men said they thought the UE national leadership was Communist, but that they could not prove it. After they won office last year, by a vote of about 4300 to 1400, Berescik and Julianelle were active in the expulsion of 26 Bridgeport members for Communist activities. Because of this, they said, the UE national leadership was out to smash their local.

Albert J. Fitzgerald, the UE general president, retorted in a statement that the 26 members were thrown out wtihout a hearing. Fitzgerald said Berescik and Julianelle were repudiated by the New England district council of UE for defying all democratic procedure.

Fitzgerald added that the Un-American Activities Committee is attacking UE because the Congressmen fear for their political future. UE is out to beat Chairman Thomas, he said, as well as Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.), Richard Nixon (R., Calif.) and Richard B. Vail (R., Ill.).

Berescik sketched over 10 years of politics in the Bridgeport UE local. Most of the time, he said, the Communists ran the local, "lock, stock and barrel." But ever since 1938, he said, he had been like John the Baptist, a voice crying in the wilderness against the reds.

The anti-Communists won control in 1944, Beresik said, but after he went in the Army in 1945, the reds got power again and held on until last year.

Although only 1 per cent of the 600,000 UE members are Communists, Berescik said, they run the national union. He blamed this on the practice of electing officers at the national convention. He said that at one convention where he was a delegate there was a move to choose the officers by general election. But it lost.

"A minority," Berescik explained sadly, "just can't put anything over."

When Representative Nixon asked what the Communists wanted with power in labor unions, Berescik told him they wanted to use it in politics.

Berescik told the committee that he thought Julius Emspak, the UE treasurer, and James Matles, the organizing director, were Communists but could not prove it. He said he gave Matles credit for building up the UE, that Matles made the union what it is today. As for Fitzgerald, the president, Berescik did not think he was a Communist.

Julianelle, the Bridgeport business agent, agreed with Berescik that a number of UE officers are Communists. But he, too, said he could not prove it.

Julianelle told the committee that the Communists got control of unions by hard work, by always turning out for meetings, by their skill on the floor and their knowledge of parliamentary law.

Besides that, he said, they were not above ringing in people who were not members to vote for them at meetings. He disagreed with Berescik over the degrees of Communist control of the Bridgeport local, but said the Communists always were a strong faction there.

Julianelle said he did not think the Taft-Hartley bill was a "slave bill" but he said he thought it was bad and he hoped Congress would amend it.

Tells of Reds In His Union

JOSEPH JULIANELLE, business agent of the Bridgeport, Conn., Local 203 of the CIO Electrical Workers Union, told the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday that half a dozen members of the local and international union are Communists or fellow travelers

French Arrest 4 GIs, Truckload of Arms

Paris, July 24 (AP).—The French news agency said today that four American soldiers and six other persons, one a former U. S. Army lieutenant, had been arrested by French security police who seized a large truck loaded with arms and ammunition.

Police said the truck and arms apparently had been stolen from an American munitions depot in Germany and driven to Paris.

Negro Veteran Gets $3200 Check In Place of Car

Ahoskie, N. C., July 24 (AP).—Harvey Jones, 23-year-old Negro war veteran, was presented a $3200 check today in place of an automobile the Ahoskie Kiwanis Club promised him. He drew a lucky number in a lottery of the club but was denied the Cadillac prize on the ground Negroes were not eligible.

The Ahoskie club in a group and International President Charles W. Armstrong of Salisbury attended the ceremony at the farm home where Jones has been living since his discharge for the Navy.

Eisler Admitted He Lied, FBI Agent Testifies

Gerhart Eisler admitted to New York FBI agents in July, 1946, that he had lied to American immigration authorities regarding his Communist Party connections.

Testimony to this effect was given yesterday in District Court by FBI Special Agent Francis X. Plant, one of two FBI men who questioned the alleged kingpin Communist a year ago in New York.

"He said he was fleeing fascism to save his life and that he knew he had lied and had committed perjury," the FBI agent told the court.

Louis Budenz, managing editor of the Communist newspaper, The Daily Worker, until he renounced communism in 1945 to join the Catholic Church, was cross-examined closely yesterday afternoon by Defense Attorney Abraham J. Isserman as to reasons he remained with The Daily Worker after deciding to leave the Communist Party.

Budenz testified he decided to leave the party August 25, 1945 but did not resign as Daily Worker managing editor until October 10, 1945. He earlier had testified that Eisler, then known to him as "Edwards," attended a Daily Worker editorial board conference in 1935 and gave orders as to how the paper should be run.

"Wasn't it your intention to wait until October so you could engage in an open act of conversion to the Catholic faith while still on The Daily Worker?" Isserman asked the now Fordham University assistant professor.

"There was no option because of the campaign of vituperation started by the Communists against anyone who leaves them," Budenz replied.

He added Communists always attack the character of persons leaving the party, holding that no one "leaves because of principles."

Isserman then drew an affirmative answer fro mthe witness that he had been promised a job at Notre Dame University before leaving The Dily Worker staff, but the witness added: "I had to have a job to earn a living."

Budenz, a principal Government witness, was cross-examined for more than four hours, especially as to articles appearing under the name "Hans Berger" in The Daily Worker. "Hans Berger" is one of the aliases the Government charges Eisler has used in this country.

is required to pass it. The vote on it in committee was not unanimous. It was learned that Senator Williams (R., Del.) and at least one other Senator voted against it and apparently they plan to carry their fight to the Senate floor.

Accepting the Stevenson bill means death for these provisions in the Langer-Chavez measure: the right to retire on a small pension at either 55 or 60, and benefits to children under 18 of Federal workers who die in the service.

MARITIME: The House yesterday also approved funds for the Maritime Commission to continue its 1600 employes on war shipping operations. It voted to give the agency $6,750,000 for salaries, the amount requested.

However, Maritime officials said the WSA staff would be reduced from 1600 to 1100 by March 1.

REORGANIZATION: The House also voted $500,000 to hire a staff to make a study of Government reorganization as required under the Brown-Lodge Act. Representative Brown (R., Ohio) made a slam-bang floor fight to get the amount raised to one million dollars.

PAY RAISES: The Senate passed and sent to the White House the Rees Bill to raise the salaries of 45 Army and Navy civilian scientists from $10,000 to $15,000 a year. This bill will break the $10,000 ceiling on Civiy Service employes.

RETURN: Both the House and Senate yesterday took final action and sent to the White House for conference report on the Independent Offices appropriation bill. The measure appropriates $900,000 to the Public Buildings Administration to move back here nine Federal agencies that have 4500 jobs.

Senator Reed (R., Kans.), the Senate manager of the bill, said that office space to house the agencies would be available in this city by early September. He added the moving cost would be more than saved in the first year by smaller rent costs here.

FPHA: Mass downgradings and firings must be made among the 3500 administrative employes in this agency. Officials of the Federal Public Housing Authority gambled and lost on getting more money from Congress than the House originally voted.

House-Senate conferees on the FPHA budget agreed to give the agency 11 million dollars for salaries. The Senate had approved 13 million dollars. But lay-offs were not made when the House voted the FPHA budget a month ago and now the agency must fire a hundred or so additional people to live within its budget.

It's estimated that between 1500 anad 1800 of the 3500 employes must be fired.

Also, the conferees put back the rider which will compel the agency to fire and downgrade several hundred employes in the middle and upper pay brackets. The rider provide that not more than 20 per cent of FPHA employes can be paid $4500 or more.

Patterson, Leaving Cabinet, Cautions Nation on Security

energetic people with scientific and other skills far beyond those of any other country."

"Rich resources, dented some by depletion during the war, but still far beyond those of any other nation."

"An industrial plant that can't be found anywhere else in the world; one that attained great respect by other people during World War II."

"The atomic bomb, certainly a strong asset, and for the time being we have a monopoly on it."

"But," he warned, "on the point of ready military strength the picture is not the same. The armed forces of the country are scarcely adequate to discharge the job of occupation, clinching and following up the victories won in World War II."

Cites Most Important Bills

As for Army legislation still pending in Congress when he stepped out of the Cabinet, Patterson said he considered among those of foremost importance:

Unification of the armed services, which was passed by the Senate during his conference but later held over by the House.

The promotion bill, introducing into the Army a system of selection by ability as well as seniority.

The bill for procurement of medical officers, without which the Army would be "in a bad way for doctors."

Two bills authorizing United States collaboration in hemispheric defense.

"And, of course, universal military training," he added.

To Work for Enlistment

As a private citizen, he said, he intended to do all he could to bring about enactment of UMT legislation. Then he added, obviously referring to congressional charges that the War Department had hired "paid propagandists" to rouse public sentiment for UMT:

"As a private citizen I don't believe I would be open to criticism of the activities of the War Department under my direction. I will say simply this:

"It is our duty to give the public information as to national defense. I have regarded that as one of the duties of the War Department, particularly when a vast number of inquiries have come from the public about UMT. We have tried to put ourselves in position to answer those questions intelligently.

"Therefore, we have carried on activities in regard to informing the public of our views and of the facts regarding universal military training. I do not believe there has been any violation of the law in that respect in any particular by the War Department."

Silent on Reported Shift

Patterson declined to comment on possibilities the State Department might take over control of some occupied countries and said time would not permit observations on the world situation.

He said he intended to return to the private practice of law in New York after spending a few weeks on his farm at Cold Springs, N. Y. He had not decided, he added, whether he would practice individually or in a firm.

Last night he was guest at a farewell dinner at the Pentagon at which about 50 were present, among them President Truman, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, and others high in official circles.

After the dinner, Mr. Truman was scheduled to present Patterson with a scroll bearing signatures of the former Cabinet member's staff.

Fight in Senate Predicted Over Murdock for NLRB

By The Associated Press

The Senate Labor Committee will meet this morning to vote on the President's appointments to the National Labor Relations Board, including that of former Senator Abe Murdock (D., Utah).

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.), talking to reporters, predicted a fight in the Senate on the Murdock nomination. He said that if the committee sends the names to the Senate today, a Senate vote will probably come tomorrow—the day Congress is scheduled to end its session.

Senate approval is necessary before Murdock and the others can serve. Mr. Truman nominated Robert N. Denham of Washington, D. C., as NLRB general counsel, and J. Copeland Gray of Buffalo as a new member of the board.

New Federation Plan for Malaya Announced by Britain

London, July 24 (AP).—The British government announced revised proposals today for the transfer of 50,000-square-mile Malaya from a crown colony to a strongly centralized federation in which nine ruling sultans will regain many of the powers they lost to Japanese invaders.

The federation will include the nine sultan states of Perak, Selangor, Negri Sembilan, Pahang, Kedah, Kelantan, Trengganu and Perlis and the two British settlements of Penang and Malacca, but at present will not include Singapore where 380,000 of the area's five million people live.

Angry native criticism followed announcement last year of plans for creation of a Malayan union, which the British government had negotiated with the nine sultans. The sultans subsequently recorded their disapproval of the agreements, and three of them flew to London to seek new treaties.

The new plan, announced in a white paper, restores the internal sovereignty which the sultans surrendered to the Japanese and signed away to the British under the Malayan Union.

The new plan, however, delegates a wide assortment of powers to the central government and provides that Britain will maintain complete control of foreign affairs and defense.

It provides for a British high commissioner, a federal executive council and a federal legislative council. The high commissioner has power to give effect to any bill which the legislative council fails to pass in a "reasonable" time and which he feels is necessary.

Burma Arrests Total Over 200, Arms Seized

Rangoon, July 24 (AP).—A wholesale roundup of Myochit Party members is proceeding upcountry with total arrests well over 200, police sources disclosed today as authorities strove to stamp out any further plotting such as resulted in last Saturday's assassination of seven Burmese cabinet members.

Stores of arms and ammunition have been seized in the roundup, informants said. Authoritative sources said prominent figures arrested included Ba Yin, right hand man of U Saw, Myochit Party leader who already had been seized after a gun battle in Rangoon; Aung Tha, a member of the party executive committee; Pa Sein, former Myochit secretary, and H. W. Grey, an Anglo-Burman who formerly was a personal assistant to U Saw.

(Prime Minister Attlee announced in the British Commons the intention to proceed with plans to grant Burma complete independence, within or without the British Empire. Meantime, he said, the Burmese interim government, now headed by Thakin Nu, successor of the slain Aung San, will be recognized as having full governing powers.)

British-Russian Trade Talks Take Turn for Better

Moscow, July 24 (AP).—Major progress toward an Anglo-Soviet trade agreement was indicated today after a meeting between Harold Wilson, British Overseas Trade Secretary, and Soviet Ministry of Foreign Trade officials.

British circles were optimistic, even jubilant, after the meeting and their attitude was interpreted in Moscow as indicating solution of issues which previously had prevented an agreement.

Wilson had prepared to leave Moscow today, making a courtesy call yesterday at the Foreign Trade Ministry to say goodby to the officials. He was said to have reviewed the British position and, unexpectedly, to have been asked to continue the negotiations today.

the pickets "will prevent enrollment of new pupils and cause cancellations by existing pupils. He declared the union and pickets are "hereby restrained from interfering with the conduct of plaintiff's business and from inducing the public to boycott plaintiff's place of business; from uttering or in any manner publishing false statements that plaintiff has locked out teachers or is engaged in a labor dispute with her employes."

Attorneys for the local studio told the court that the Arthur Murray firm here "is not a partner, associate, agent or employe of the dance studio of Arthur Murray in New York." The local firm merely operates under a "Arthur Murray" license and pays a stipulated percentage of its gross receipts to the New York firm of the same name, the court was told.

Within a half hour after the marshal stopped the Conga line, Attorney David Rein arrived from the Lawyers Guild. He advised the picketers to desist until he had a chance to study the court order.

Pickets Disperse

The pickets then dispersed with instructions to meet in Rein's office this morning at 9:30.

The dancing pickets from New York are Miss Anne Forsyth, 25; Victor De Gennaro, 27, and Miss Monica Keating, 24.

Miss Forsyth told reporters they came here with money donated by other teacher-strikers in New York. She said the cruz of the strike there is that Murray, rather than give his employes severance pay and agree on a fair system of rehiring, is willing to close his New York studio. She said the pickets came here, as well as to many of the 93 Murray studios elsewhere, to cut down his income so he will come to terms.

The 50-odd instructors at the local studio met earlier this week and announced: (1) they are satisfied with present conditions (2) they do not wish to be unionized and (3) they would picket the pickets.

which you fought so valiantly only two years ago."

At a clandestine meeting tonight a well-informed Republican told reporters that Indonesian troops were under orders not to waste themselves in a futile attempt to block Dutch armor and infantry. They have been instructed to destroy as much property as possible and then retire for guerilla action, he said.

Underground in Action

Dutch correspondents in Modjokerto, on the Dutch perimeter around Soerabaja, telegraphed that the native underground went into action last midnight and the crackle of small-arms fire continued until this afternoon.

Front-line dispatches indicated that except among the tough Chinese warriors of North Sumatra the Dutch have encountered little organized opposition.

Often Dutch troops find scores of abandoned pairs of shoes by the roadside—a sign the Indonesians have abandoned their uniforms and avoided capture by posing as barefooted, half-naked natives working in the rice fields.

There is reason to believe that most Dutch objectives have been reached, and that offensive action may soon be halted. Indonesian informants believe Jogjakarta will not be captured, and that the Dutch by political means will attempt to split Java into west Java (Suadense) and east Java states.

Contrary to previous indications, however, official Dutch sources said tonight that Jogjakarta probably would be occupied.

In his first news conference since hostilities opened, Lieut. Gen. Siem B. Spoor, commanding the Dutch campaign, said the "Republican army is mostly running." He reported that few prisoners had been taken.

The Dutch troops which occupied Cheribon, a key Republican port 130 miles east of Batavia, seized 30,000 tons of rubber.

Dr. J. E. van Hoogstraten, director of economic affairs for the Netherlands East Indies, said raw materials bottled up for nearly two years inside the Indonesian republic would begin moving into world markets probably in about a month. In addition to rubber, Dutch troops also have scooped up quantities of sugar, quinine and other materials.

Reporting on the fighting in northern Sumatra, Spoor said Dutch troops advancing out of Medan had encountered "fierce resistance" from Chinese Moslems, but the resistance now had died down.

Championed by India

Lake Success, July 24 (AP).—India took the role of champion of the Indonesian republic before the United Nations today, but so far no nation has officially intervened with a request for United Nations action.

The delegations of the Big Five are particularly watchful. Comment from them was guarded but a spokesman for the Soviet Union said the fighting in Indonesia was in reality a war. He said this was just another trouble spot, to be added to the fighting in China, Palestine and to the other sore spots in the world.

Breaking into a debate on an economic report in the U. N. Economic and Social Council, R. K. Nehru, Indian delegate, declared that "India and Asia sympathize with Indonesia in her struggle against terrible odds."

New Delhi, July 24 (U.P.).—Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, head of the Indian interim government, today enunciated a virtual "Monroe Doctrine" for Asia.

"Apart from the merits of the case in Indonesia," he declared, "no European nation, whatever it may be, has any business to use its army in Asia against the people of Ahia."

Ban Ship Loading

Leftists Gain in Italy

Rome, July 24 (U.P.).—Italy's non-Communist government suffered its first defeat in the national assembly today. Leftists pushed through a motion cancelling a Ministry of Education order which would dissolve the state advisory board and substitute a hand-picked committee, with liberals joining other leftists. The motion was carried, 218 to 194.

Ex-Slave, 105, Sits on Porch And Marvels Over Freedom

Sitting on the stoop of his own home at 1117 Fairmont st. nw., thinking he could walk or just go on settin', or could do exactly what he pleased and when, John Wesley Washington, ex-slave, age, 105, marveled again at the meaning of freedom.

Five score and five years have not dulled his recollections of the spanning years, an interview yesterday indicated.

He doffed his horn-rimmed glasses—never used them till he was 90—and talked of the plantation where he was born a slave, July 23, 1842. That was Col. Jess Perkins' place, 10 miles up from Jackson, Miss.

He recalled going up to the overseer every Sunday for the week's rations, never leaving the plantation without a pass. And he remembered the names of the men who tried to buck the system, the men who fought the masters and ended wearing chains and iron rivets on their ankles, belt harnesses that chafed the skin till it peeled.

First John Wesley Washington heard about freedom was from a school teacher but he kept working on the plantation through the war and for six months after the surrender, when the colonel came back with a bullet-riddled arm.

When he finally summoned courage to ask for pay and the colonel thundered refusal, Washington left for Jackson, despite the colonel's threats to have him arrested.

He helped haul cotton hidden in swamps, then sharecropped cotton for $4.50 a week. For several years he worked a plantation and received as pay one forth the crop.

Then Washington saw a chance for advancement and took it. For 20 years he worked for contractors who built jails and courthouses in Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas. The son of a blacksmith, he could use his hands and understood people. He became a foreman.

He read, talked to folks and decided the future for him was in real estate. And it was. He sold real estate for a large Jackson firm.

In 1937 he joined his daughter here. With savings he bought his present house. She died at 71, last year.

Five years ago, at 100, he thought of returning to the real estate business. He thought he sew new opportunities. But friends dissuaded him. So now he sits on his stoop, incredibly vigorous and alert, sipping an occasional toddy, smoking a cigar, and telling friends and passers-by about freedom.

The way Washington, 105 years wise, views freedom, it means "recognizing obligations, living moderately and with one woman, and voting regularly, Republican, usually. Except for Roosevelt."

Committee Is Named to Study Marshall Plan Commitments

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

America's ability to meet the demands for goods for export to aid in implementing the Marshall Plan for Europe will be studied by a "nonpartisan committee of distinguished citizens," Commerce Secretary Harriman announced last night.

The committee closed a two-day meeting last night to organize for the report. Nine subcommittees were named, to start at once on studies in their special fields, reporting in time so that a complete report to President Truman may be ready by October 1.

This report will accompany one from Secretary of Interior Krug on the Nation's natural resources and one on the Nation's economic situation by Chairman Edwin G. Nourse of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Two-Way Study

The problems to be studied, Harriman said, will include the possibility of increasing American production in certain lines to meet demands of the Marshall Plan, as well as consideration of some restrictions on domestic consumption of some goods vitally needed abroad.

He spoke of the need of aiding in the production of coal and food in Europe, through increasing European supplies of fertilizer, and Europe's coal output by providing sufficient food for the heavy workers in the coal mining industry.

Also to be considered are goods that Europe, particularly Germany, can export to the United States.

The subcommittees named are:

Capital and Durable Goods: Hiland Batcheller, Allegheny-Ludlum Steel Corp., Pittsburgh, chairman; James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO; Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corp., South Bend, Ind.; and Harold G. Moulton, president The Brookings Institution.

Consumer Goods: John L. Collyer, president B. F. Goodrich Co., Akron, Ohio, chairman; E. R. Deupree, president Procter & Gamble Co., Cincinnati, Ohio; Calvin B. Hoover, dean of graduate school, Duke University, and Robert E. Buchanan, dean of graduate college, Iowa State College.

Food Resources: Chester C. Davis, president Federal Reserve Bank, St. Louis, chairman; Robert E. Buchanan, William I. Myers, dean of the college of agriculture, Cornell University, and Robert G. Sproul, president of the University of California.

Manpower: Paul G. Hoffman, chairman; James B. Carey, George Meany, secretary-treasurer American Federation of Labor, and Robert M. La Follette.

Mineral Resources: Robert Koenig, president Ayrshire Collieries Co., Indianapolis, chairman; Melville F. Coolbaugh, Golden, Colo.; E. R. Deupree, and George Meany.

Transportation: Granville Conway, The Cosmopolitan Shipping Co., New York City, chairman; James B. Carey, Robert Koenig and Edward S. Mason, dean, school of public administration, Harvard University.

Economic and Financial Analysis: Owen D. Young, General Electric Co. chairman; Harold G. Moulton; W. Randolph Burgess, National City Bank of New York; Paul G. H. Hoffman, Calvin B. Hoover and Edward S. Mason.

An organization subcommittee was named with Owen D. Young, chairman; Davis, Hoffman, LaFollette, Mason, Meany and Moulton.

A final drafting committee was named with LaFollette chairman.

TABLE WINE is the pure fermented juice of vine-ripened fresh grapes. It is a product of agriculture, as bread and butter are. And so table wines—like Claret, Burgundy, Sauterne and Rhine Wine—go particularly well with meals.

In growing wines, the ripe grapes are first separated from the stems. Then the grapes are crushed and allowed to ferment. The young wine goes next into large storage casks to settle and age. And as time goes on it is drawn off into smaller and smaller casks, each time becoming clearer in color and finer in flavor.

Finally wine is bottled and continues to improve with age. Wine is simply nature's way to preserve good grapes. Try some tonight. Wine Advisory Board, 717 Market Street, San Francisco.

Police Board Reserves Ruling As Beating Case Hearings End

A Police Trial Board yesterday concluded hearing in the alleged attack on a Georgetown University student involving James A. Stewart, jr., and Warren L. Garrett, suspended Seventh Precinct police privates.

The trial, which consumed about 2½ days, grew out of complaint of Daniel J. Fitzpatrick that he was beaten by Stewart without provocation on the morning of June 4.

A verdict in the case is expected today.

May Restore Either or Both

Board members may restore either or both of the accused men to the police force if they are found not guilty, or, in case of a guilty finding, may fine or dismiss either one on any one of the four charges.

Stewart is accused of willful maltreatment, abuse and assault on a prisoner, while Garrett is charged with allowing such treatment without reporting it. Both are charged with conduct unbecoming officers, untruthful statements to superiors, and neglect of duty.

Both yesterday denied each charge categorically, and recounted the events of the early morning encounter with Fitzpatrick as a struggle during the arrest of the student.

Fitzpatrick had asserted he was struck by Stewart while he was waiting for a streetcar with a companion, denying the policemen's testimony that he had shouted a threat at Stewart as the latter and Garrett drove by. Stewart said he heard a threat, got out of the car and placed Fitzpatrick under arrest, the latter being hurt, according to the officer, when he struggled with him and both fell to the street.

Get Leniency Petition

The board members, Inspector Clement P. Cox, Capt. Walter T. Storm and Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch, received from James J. Laughlin, defense counsel, a statement on the good character of the two officers signed by about 30 Georgetown residents. Laughlin also submitted a petition for leniency from about 80 Georgetown businessmen on behalf of Stewart, whom they characterized as an efficient and aggressive officer.

The board also heard yesterday the statements of three Seventh Precinct policemen present when Stewart and another officer brought Fitzpatrick to the station house on May 30 under arrest. At that time, they said, Fitzpatrick declared he would "get" Stewart "if it's the last thing I do."

The hearing, which opened last Friday, closed yesterday with the argument of the defense counsel. Assistant Corporation Counsel John J. Donnelly, jr., prosecuting the case, declined to argue a rebuttal.

Hirschberg, Family Get Death Threats

New York, July 24 (AP).—An anonymous letter writer has threatened to "blow up" Harold E. Hirshberg, Navy petty officer being tried on charges of maltreating American fellow prisoners held by the Japanese, Hirshberg's counsel said today.

Lieut. Comdr. John J. O'Neil, defense counsel, said the writer made the same threats against Hirshberg's family in Brooklyn, and against O'Neil himself. The officer said he had turned the four-page, penciled letter over to the FBI.

The defense counsel told newsmen of the communication outside the courtroom. It did not come up before the court-martial board which is trying Hirshberg, 29-year-old chief signalman, on charges of assaulting his fellow prisoners and informing the Japanese that three of them intended to escape, resulting in beatings which caused the death of one.

Lieut. (j.g.) Thomas B. Hurtt, 29, of Tacoma, Wash., testified today that he and other officers of an American prisoner of war group in the Philippines once warned Hirshberg to stop informing on his fellow prisoners.

Hurtt said he and the others told the defendant at Nielson Field, Luzon, in April, 1942, that unless he stopped running to the Japanese they would ask the Navy to court-martial him if and when they returned to the United States after the war.

The witness also told the court Hirshberg sought to drive his work section especially hard to win special favors and gifts of cigarets and candy from the Japanese.

Services Reveal Training Center In Atomic Arms

The Army and Navy announced yesterday that they had been engaged for a year in training their forces in the development and use of atomic weapons.

They said a training camp, jointly operated, was located at Sandia, N. Mex., and announced its director was Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, under whose supervision the atomic bomb was developed. Rear Admiral William S. Parsons, also connected with development of the bomb, is deputy director.

Groves, Parsons and others connected with the development were scheduled to meet behind closed doors today with members of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy to explain what they are now doing.

Yesterday's announcement said Joint Task Force No. 1, which carried out the atomic bomb tests last year at Bikini, had been turned over to the project at Sandia.

Pope Receives Clayton

Rome, July 24 (AP).—Will Clayton, United States Undersecretary of State who is in Italy for economic conference, was received by Pope Pius XII in a 30-minute audience today. The Undersecretary was guest of honor at a state luncheon given by Foreign Minister Carlo Sforza.

Costa Rican Riot Deaths Increase to 8

San Jose, Costa Rica, July 24 (AP).—The death toll in four days of political disorders and sitdown strikes in four Costa Rican cities grew to eight today with the death of three persons previously listed among 59 injured.

Troops in armored cars continued to patrol San Jose, armed forces policed Cartago, near here, and the sitdown strike which precipitated the series of clashes beginning Saturday between police and members of the opposition Democratic Party was still in force.

Stores, banks, shops and other establishments were still closed in San Jose, Cartago and Alajuela, but the armed clashes had ceased. All was reported quiet again in San Isidro Coronado, the fourth city where clashes took place.

No arrests were reported and no martial law had been proclaimed.

Guatemala Takes Precautions

Guatemala City, July 24 (U.P.).—Guatemalan authorities moved today to forestall any possibility of a revolutionary attempt against the Honduras government of Dictator President Tiburcio Carias by Honduras political refugees in this country.

Col. Francisco J. Arana, chief of staff of the Guatemalan army, ordered that the numerous Honduran emigres living in areas near the Guatemala-Honduras border be concentrated at specified points.

Flier Admits Slaying His Czech War Bride

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 24 (U.P.).—Undersheriff Henry Clark said today that David A. Downey, handsome former AAF lieutenant, had confessed to the slaying of his pretty Czech war bride on a mountainside near here last Friday.

Clark said Downey had admitted that he and his pretty, 24-year-old wife Loly 'just didn't get along.' Downey told the undersheriff that the $40,000 insurance he held on his wife was not the murder motive, Clark added. Downey first said his wife slipped and fell down the mountain while they were searching for a picnic site.

Changes Ordered

Truman's Tie 'Too Sinatra' For Portrait

St. Paul, Minn., July 24 (AP).—President Truman likes his bow ties, but his White House aides won't let him wear the gaudy Frankie Sinatra type—at least not in a portrait.

Carl Bohnen, St. Paul artist who has done many of the Nation's notables in oils, put the President on canvas adorned in a striped bow tie of "all colors of the rainbow."

Bohnen said the painting came back quickly, however, with a notation from Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, Truman aide, that only a polka dot job would do.

In changing the presidential haberdashery, to conform with White House taste, Bohnen said he had to alter the breast pocket handkerchief to match the tie. He also dressed Mr. Truman in a blue rather than a gray suit.

The three-quarter length portrait will be returned to the White House next week after a newly applied coat of varnish has dried.

The President sat for the painting over a two-week period last October. Bohnen was commissioned by David Bennett of Chicago, who ordered it as a gift to Mr. Truman.

1000-Lb. Steer Scatters Customers in Store

Trenton, N. J., July 24 (U.P.).—A 1000-pound steer scattered customers and clerks in a downtown Army-Navy supply store here today.

The steer escaped from a slaughterhouse and galloped into the downtown section with police cars in pursuit. It ran into the supply store and continued straight down the center aisle to the rear of the building, as frightened women screamed.

Then it reversed, ran back to the front of the store, and smashed a display window in reaching the street. The animal was finally cornered in a parking lot and shot by a patrolman.

Transport Bill Is Approved By Commons

London, July 24 (AP).—The House of Commons sent the billion-pound ($4,000,000,000) transport nationalization bill back to the House of Lords for final action today after a rowdy, nonstop session that lasted 20 hours and 20 minutes ending shortly before 11 o'clock this morning.

More than 200 M. P.'s, yawning, haggard and unshaven, were in the debating chamber at the end of the marathon debate in which charges of drunkenness, impudence and "spoils" politics were flung amid appeals for more dignity in the proceedings. One member barked like a dog when the argument turned to greyhound racing.

The Labor majority accepted a number of the House of Lords technical amendments to the bill which puts all railroads and long-distance motor transport under public ownership, but turned down more than 40 amendments which would have changed the measure vitally.

The Lords now have the choice of withdrawing their amendments or sticking to their guns and delaying the measure. Most parliamentary experts said the Lords probably would bow to the Commons, rather than risk a constitutional conflict in which the Commons might further trim the power of the upper house.

Even if the peers refuse their assent to the bill in its present form it can become law if the Commons passes it three times in two years.

The town and country planning bill, which government spokesmen called a long step toward nationalization of land, was passed by the House of Lords. Commons already has passed the bill.

Under terms of the measure, owners may not develop or change the character of their properties without state permission. It also provides for such developments as "satellite towns" near big cities, and sets up a $1,200,000,000 fund to compensate owners whose properties are taken for state purposes.

Swing Sessions

Skitch Has His Own Band Now

NEW YORK, JULY 24.—At the Hotel Pennsylvania is Skitch Henderson in his first major job with a regular orchestra. Skitch has been making band records for some time and has led featured orks on the air for both Bing and Frankie. But until last month, he used pick-up combos. This, for the first time, was the real thing.

Rumors say his pals Crosby, Sinatra and Mercer flashed the necessary loot and conned him into leaving the radio studios for the dance-band business.

"A lie," insists Henderson. "I did it myself. And just three thousand more bucks to the bank and it's all mine!"

Skitch is from the piano caressing school . . . like Claude Thronhill and Elliot Lawrence. He and the band have a beat, but it comes out soft as fuzz. It could stand a little more guts for my dough; but his bookers looked pleased.

(Latest recording sample: Capitol's "Dream, on a Summer Night" and "Dancing With a Deb.")

Further thoughts from Skitch, a singularly assured and articulate musician: "I'm 27 and from England. Folks in foreign service. Came to the United States alone when I was 15 or 16 and never bothered going home. I slowly built a solid rep in Hollywood radio and unless things become so big, I intend quitting this dance band stuff after six years and returning to radio."

In 1953 I'll remind him.

QUARTER NOTES: Two months before Jimmy Lunceford died at 45, he told me of plans to revive as closely as possible the early band that brought the success that had lately eluded him . . .

Because Desi Arnaz is married to Lucille Ball, he was spared serious grief. By watching her at a Detroit opening, he missed being in his band bus when it was recently demolished in an Indiana crash. The violinist who had taken his front seat lost an eye . . .

Wait till you hear Benny G. and Stan K. sing on a forthcoming Capitol record by the Hollywood Hucksters, gag group that also includes Benny Carter, Red Norvo and Charlie Shavers.

RECORD BRIEFS: WINX's Joe Dosh has a topper in "Apple Blossom Wedding" (Continental) . . . Plenty of album jazz out: the great Ellington sounds almost like 1948 on a Columbia set whose heretofore unreleased sides were waxed before 1938 . . . Just received three exciting albums cut informally at actual radio, club and concert sessions. Disc has Vol. 5 of "Jazz At The Philharmonic," starring Illinois Jacquet and Shorty Nadine (Nat Cole), among others. Vox has comparable impromptu fare in "Saturday Night Swing Session," featuring Flip Phillips and Roy Eldridge. Best of all is Vox's pressing of Charlie Christian sides originally needled shortly before the great guitarist's death years ago.

Columbia's latest boogie woogie collection is an assortment of mixed-quality sides by eight performers whose masters had been languishing in the factory stock room. The most modern side, by Ken Kersey, fares best. Meade Lux Lewis, James P. Johnson and Pete Johnson come out OK, too.

Nellie Lutcher, next year's biggest novelty blues singer, continues to zoom with "He's A Real Gone Guy" (Capitol). Art Lund is in his favorite lightly swinging groove with "Naughty Angeline" (MGM). Apollo, the company that specializes in wild horn men whose noses bleed when they blow under high C, has listed: Cat "Only-Dogs-Can-Hear-My-High-Ones" Anderson on "Swingin' The Cat" and Arnett "Honk" Cobb on "Top Flight"—Ziggy Elman managed to have his short-lived band re-record his forte, "And the Angels Sing" (MGM) . . . Same company has a beautiful David Rose album, "Holiday For Strings" done in the lush Rose manner . . . Tommy Mercer's vocals put oomph in Charlie Spivak's "Fine Thing" (RCA Victor).

'The Ghost' Only Lacks a Climax

By Richard L. Coe

"A DAILY READER" living in Baltimore has written us that he's looking forward to our review of "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," which arrived yesterday at the Capitol.

Our anonymous friend enjoyed this very much—"a relief," he writes, "from some of the stinkers I've seen lately. The picture moves along beautifully when Gene Tierney and Rex Harrison are on the screen . . . Harrison's ghost is acted to perfection and Miss Tierney has graduated into a real actress."

Up to a point we're inclined to agree. We found the first two-thirds of this one thoroughly captivating. It is novel and, as Daily Reader puts it, it rolls along nicely. Its setting is beguiling and the production details are top-notch.

We must confess, though, that for us at least, "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" collapsed a little too long before it was over.

Here you have the notion of a Victorian widow, understandably bored with her in-laws, who decides to find a small house by the sea where she can live quietly with her daughter and housekeeper. The house she finds is a honey, built by a sea captain who is believed to have committed suicide. Previous tenants have been frightened away because they thought the place was haunted.

Miss Tierney, as the widow, falls in love with the house and discounts all that ghostly nonsense. But she's not in it long before the ghost puts in his appearance. She recognizes him from a portrait in the living room, which he demands she bring upstairs to the bedroom where his telescope still looks out to sea. Because she shows spunk he reluctantly gets to like her. Tierney has a role well suited to her gentle spirit, though we don't go all the way with our Baltimore reader on her delineation of an old lady. Everyone, including the audience, would have been better off if Mrs. Muir had passed away to her spirit lover some years sooner.

Too Much, Too Long

When her London in-laws gleefully tell her that her investments are on the rocks and that she'd better come back to live with them, the captain comes through with a suggestion. He'll dictate his memoirs, which she'll have published. They're evidently rather salty recollections, though the strongest word the movie Code permits both author and copyist is 'Blast!"

The captain ruefully feels that his pretty friend should have real life romance, so he tenderly disappears. Real life romance turns out to be a married man, so lonely Gene is lonely again. But the book's a success, the years pass and her daughter grows up to have a child of her own. The solace of Mrs. Muier's closing years is the thought of her curious romance with a ghost. And when, finally, old but happy, Mrs. Muir passes on, the captain's ghost is on deck to escort her to the spirit world.

Very fancy, what? As with all fantasies, the author's problem has been to wind up his story. Our kindest critic, who has read the book, tells us that Scriptwriter Philip Dunne has followed R. A. Dick's novel closely, so that collapse we spoke of can't very well be blamed on the picture.

It's also too long, a natural result of not knowing how to find an ending. All of which is a pity, because "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir" is at least a novel idea affectionately handled.

Harrison is fine as the ghost, looking completely seaworthy in his whiskers and black suit. Miss

GOODBY CONGRESS, HELLO SELZNICK: "Duel in the Sun" comes back to town today at the Pix, with Congress scheduled to adjourn tomorrow. Only a few weeks ago some Congressmen were thundering about David O. Selznick's latest film, which by then had closed at the Palace. Here are Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotten in a scene from the picture the annoyed legislators won't have to see

Earle's 'Possessed' Explores Snake Pit Almost Too Deeply

By Leo Brady

"Possessed," at the Earle, contains on its sound track the most complete psychiatric case history ever recorded as companion to a melodrama. As melodrama, the film is painstakingly made and extremely camera-wise, and performs a fine artistic operation on your emotions.

But "Possessed" runs afoul of the snake pit that bests all psycho-melodrama and is successful in extricating itself only sporadically. That it is outside the pit oftener than in makes it a good picture. Question: Is the audience to regard its unbalanced heroine with the clinical eye of the doctor who coaxes her story out of her, or is it to share her emotion with the dilated pupil of the breathless spectator? On the one hand—excitement, on the other, detachment. Since the film is split almost equally between the two approaches, its effect is similiarly divided. This might be described as cinematic schizophrenia.

Approach Shots Best

The story is told by flashback when Joan Crawford is found wandering the streets of San Francisco mumbling the name "David" at strange men. The opening scenes of the picture are hauntingly filmed and are the film's best. Especially suspenseful is a sequence in which the camera lets us see the hospital through the patient's eyes as the girl is admitted for examination.

By means of what might be narco-hypnosis — the professional jargon is too fast for this reviewer to be sure—the doctor probes into Joan's life to find the cause of her illness. He digs through a blighted romance, an unromantic marriage, a feeling of not being wanted and a couple of murders. The events of her life have been high-voltage and the flashback scenes are full of pressure-speech excitement. The cause he finally hits on appears not quite correct to this unpracticed diagnosis, but he promises to pull her out of it at the end.

Miss Crawford Effective

Always the transitions from sick bed to melodrama are taken with the understanding that the girl was not responsible for her actions, which reduces audience sympathy to a kind of superior pity and turns some of the film's emotional cartridges into blanks.

The film is not to be confused, by the way, with (a) a picture of the same name made some years ago by Crawford and Gable, or (b) diabolical possession, although Stanley Ridges as the psychiatrist makes one attempt at Biblical interpretation which imperils his standing as a scientist.

Miss Crawford conveys exactly both a jealous woman and an unbalanced one and operates happily on both the picture's levels. Van Heflin is tough and completely understandable as the jilting lover and handles with facility an amazing succession of epigrams put into his cynical mouth by script writers Sylvia Richards and Ranald MacDougall—surprisingly witty ones they are, too. He, incidentally, treats Miss Crawford as if she could be described accurately by a brief unscientific word and no nonsense. Raymond Massey as the husband and Stanley Ridges as the doctor stand out among the support.

Ives "Crime"

From New York comes the news of the establishment of an AFL-CIO unity committee on a State basis aimed at unseating Senator Irving M. Ives in 1952. Senator Ives' "crime" consists of his vote for the Taft-Hartley Act. Forgotten are Senator Ives' great services in behalf of labor, organized and unorganized, in the State of New York and his unwearying campaign in the Senate against repressive amendments to the Taft-Hartley bill. A freshman Senator, Mr. Ives has shown public spirit, progressiveness and zeal. His record so far warrants great expectations of his public career, especially in making changes and corrections in the new legislation, as provided for in the setting up in the statute of a joint congressional committee.

This watchdog committee was an innovation in the statute of great importance. We might not have run into the need for a comprehensive statute if provision had been made in the Wagner Act for change in the light of experience. But organized labor bottled up the Senate Labor Committee; it refused to admit the need for any change; it declined to cooperate with Congress in the effort which resulted in the Taft-Hartley Act; and it now appears it will do nothing to help the new joint congressional committee to revise the handiwork of Congress as time goes on. More's the pity. The stiffnecked and vengeful attitude shown by the so-called unity committee in New York is a reminder of Representative Monroney's observation during the Taft-Hartley debate. "The trouble with organized labor is that it has only one sentence. It gives you the death penalty for everything from overparking to murder."

Kravchenko's Warning

We do not doubt the truth of Mr. Kravchenko's statement to the Un-American Activities Committee that Soviet diplomatic personnel operate as a world-wide spy ring. But we ought not to lose our heads about it—and, in the process, our liberties. There is a fine, almost indistinguishable, line between espionage and the acquirement of information "legitimately" through diplomatic immunity. Diplomatic usage is in effect a masquerade, giving the cloak of respectability to a universal practice. In this respect we have no reason to feel self-righteous. Our attaches in various countries are there for the specific purpose of gathering all the information they can lay their hands on without compromising their position. Other governments know this.

What Mr. Kravchenko is talking about, of course, is the kind of blatant and often crude connivance by Soviet Embassy officials uncovered by the Canadian spy trials. The implication that such activities are proceeding apace in this country, with the help of fellow travelers, puts a premium both on efficient guarding of our state secrets and on constant vigilance to prosecute offenders. Some day we may have to insist upon reciprocity in the matter of hospitality to agents, newspaper correspondents and other visitors. At the same time it would be well for the Un-American Activities Committee and other zealots to remember that a campaign of hysteria, taking the form of seeing spies under the bed and depriving citizens of their rights without specific reason, would only further the aims Mr. Kravchenko has outlined.

Poll Tax

The House action in passing a Federal anti-poll-tax bill was, of course, only a gesture. There is no chance that the Senate will consider this measure, let alone act upon it, in the two days of the session yet remaining. Nevertheless it is a gesture worth the attention of the few Southern States in which poll taxes are still permitted to discourage the exercise of suffrage rights. This newspaper has entertained such doubts respecting the constitutionality of Federal legislation abolishing the poll tax as to be unwilling to support the measure recently passed by the House. We entertain no doubts, however, respecting the iniquity of the poll tax or the injury which its retention in a few States does to the Nation as a whole.

It is one of the ironies of history that those States which some decades ago sought secession from the Union now exercise, through such franchise-limiting institutions as the single-party system and the poll tax, a wholly disproportionate influence upon the affairs of the Nation as a whole. Their narrow basis of suffrage tends to give their representatives long tenure in office, and under the congressional tradition of seniority these representatives come to claim the most important committee chairmanships when the Democratic Party is in power. The most ludicrous, if not the most lamentable, manifestation of this irony is that until just lately Senator Bilbo of Mississippi enjoyed the title of "mayor" of the Capital of the United States.

But of course the worst effects of the mass disfranchisement inflicted by the poll tax are felt at home. And it is there, we think, that they can best be remedied. The House action may well be taken by the poll-tax States as an invitation to act on their own initiative. That is the one sure way to avert Federal interference with a long outmoded local practice.

Last Chance

The cartoon on this page gives an impression of the hopelessness that will be caused among the displaced persons by our vacated Congress. The hungry sheep are looking up and are not fed. This seems their lot as the result of the shelving of the Stratton bill to admit 400,000 refugees. The bill may come up next year, but in that event there would have to be another round of testimony to disprove all the arguments which have been marshaled against it.

Evidently the latest and principal argument is Representative Gossett's. This is that 100,000 DPs are Russian Jews whom the Soviet Union is deliberately trying to plant in this country for fifth-column activity. This is quite untrue. The resort to such an argument shows an opposition bereft of either logic or bowels in resisting a measure which has Nation-wide backing. The fact is that of the 600,000 DPs, Jews of all nationalities number only about 130,000, and they are mainly Polish Jews. They are refugees, not missionaries—refugees from Nazi suppression and Communist repression alike. The Russians, far from wanting them to spread the Marxian gospel, are anxious to see them repatriated to what the Russians euphemistically call their homelands. The reason for this anxiety is in some cases that they are proscribed for anti-Communist activity, in others that they know too much about the kind of government in Russia or in the countries under Soviet sway, and could many a tale unfold. If this cannot be done, the next best thing from Moscow's point of view is to "put them down," as Deputy Foreign Minister Vishinsky is reported to have said to Secretary Byrnes at the Paris conference, with a thumb-down gesture expressive of extermination.

In point of fact, it is not the Jewish DPs who want to come to America. Judging from the evidence of those who have visited the islands of refugees in Germany, the Jews have only one promised land in mind, and that is Palestine. The Balts and the Poles, who preponderate in the DPs camps, will go anywhere that promises a chance of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. For 150 years this country, to its great benefit and greater glory, has been affording this chance.

Even the critics of the Stratton bill have withdrawn their case against "inundation." The Stratton bill would admit 100,000 a year for four years. It would not do the slightest violence to our quota system, but would accommodate these people through an adjustment of the quotas, which have not been filled in respect of some nationalities for years back. The candidates for admission would not be in their present predicament if they were not more or less our kind of people. It is distressing to those who have seen these folk in their camps to read the epithets that have been hurled at them by opponents of the Stratton bill. One remembers such sights as the pioneer-looking woman presiding over her kitchen in the Wiesbaden camp for Balts. She fled from the tyranny in which she had to live and work as professor of home economics at Riga University when the Russians came in. That she and the others like her are no-goods is a gross aspersion that reacts upon any person making it.

For God and humanity, as Mazzini would say, let some member of the Judiciary Committee ask that the Stratton bill be called up before adjournment, so that Congress may reassert our moral leadership in a world of tumbling values. The jurisdiction of conscience has never yet stopped at the frontier. It will mark the eclipse of our civilization when it does.

Missouri Compromise

Senate Democrats are inevitably adding to the suspicion that in blocking the inquiry into the Missouri vote scandal they have something to hide. This seems to us abysmally poor politics. The mere attempt to suppress a probe by the Senate Judiciary Committee has made the matter a sure issue in the 1948 campaign, regardless of the facts in the case. Moreover, if, as the Administration contends, the Justice Department did nothing to whitewash the original investigation, then the Senate bloc has done a disservice to Attorney General Clark. If his skirts are clean, Mr. Clark should welcome an opportunity to tell his story fully.

The issue now has gone far beyond the attempt by President Truman to purge Congressman Roger Slaughter at last summer's primary. The mechanics of the steal engineered by the Pendergast machine in Kansas City are now being brought out by a Federal grand jury and the FBI. These facts will come to light irrespective of congressional action. It will be impossible to camouflage them. But there are other relevant questions which ought to be answered by the Administration. The country has a right to know why the preliminary FBI investigation was so restricted in scope and why the matter was dropped by the Department of Justice until outside pressure forced the Administration to take it up again. Possibly there is a logical explanation for this seeming effort to call off the dogs. But certainly the obstructionism of the Senate Democrats only weakens the Administration's pose of innocence.

Doubtless, as has been charged, there is some political motivation behind the Kem resolution which the Democrats are blocking. But no smear the Republicans could concoct would be worse than what the Democrats are doing to themselves. For when the facts do come out, they will do so with far more damaging effect than if the Democrats had aided the inquiry. Quite apart from any partisan considerations, the disclosures to date thoroughly warrant a congressional investigation both of the primary and of the inexcusable dalliance in following up the irregularities. By hamstringing the effort to get at the truth, the Democrats have only contributed to the smell of a situation that is already highly obnoxious.

Social Security

Senate approval of a resolution authorizing a comprehensive investigation of the social security program greatly improves the chances that the Eightieth Congress will take action to extend the coverage of the present system and revise the schedule of payroll taxes in conformity with up-to-date estimates of the cost of the system. Since social security legislation involving the raising of revenue originates in the House, the Senate investigation is ostensibly designed merely to assist it to deal more intelligently with measures passed by the House. If that body continues to follow the obstructionist policies heretofore pursued, the Senate inquiry will be as barren of results as were the comprehensive studies and exhaustive hearings undertaken for the benefit of the Ways and Means Committee of the Seventy-ninth Congress. Fortunately, there is reason to hope that the House may be galvanized into action if the Senate Finance Committee promptly enlists the services of experts to assist it in framing a report that can be used as the basis for hearings early in 1948.

The major problems calling for attention are (1) extension of benefits to millions of workers as yet uncovered, (2) possible revision of the scale of old-age and unemployment benefits to compensate for increases in living costs, (3) administrative problems and methods of financing and (4) introduction of new forms of social insurance such as sickness and disability benefits. On some of these issues great differences of opinion exist. However, the proposal to expand old-age and survivors insurance coverage to all the gainfully employed has widespread public support. Moreover, the Republican Party platform pledges support for "extension of the existing old-age insurance and unemployment insurance systems to all employes not already covered." If the present Republican-dominated Congress fulfills that pledge, it will earn the thanks of the people and incidentally be able to call attention to the derelictions of the preceding Democratic-dominated Congress.

Floral Protection

While the Dutch prepare to make another payment this fall on their gift of gratitude to the United States in the form of 4000 hardy azaleas to be planted in the National Arboretum, a bill that has just passed the House, and that might adversely affect their flowering plant industry, even their whole economic life, is causing them much concern.

It is a measure backed by American nurserymen to permit the Secretary of Agriculture to limit imports of foreign nursery stock—ostensibly for protection against foreign disease pests. The original bill as passed by the Senate included flowering bulbs, but this, together with the phrase "for propagation purposes," was eliminated by the House Committee on Agriculture. The Senate is being asked to accept these deletions. Both the State Department and women's garden clubs opposed the bill. The clubs charged it was a concealed attack on this country's imports of Dutch bulbs and flowering plants and was designed to force amateur gardeners to buy less satisfactory American products.

Though the bill in its present form is more satisfactory, its opponents maintain it offers an opening wedge to discrimination against foreign flowers. While bulbs, as tulips, hyacinths, crocuses, are the Hollanders' main exports here, yet their flowering plants, as azaleas, lilacs, rhododendrons, are also in demand. They have about 100 varieties of azaleas unknown in the United States. Opponents of the bill also maintain it is unnecessary since all Dutch bulbs and flowering plants imported here go through the rigid plant inspection system of the Netherlands, then through the efficient inspection service of the Department of Agriculture.

Since the bill seems an unneeded precaution, it is unfortunate that such legislation to discourage and alarm the Dutch should have been instituted at a time when they were making such heroic efforts to get back on their feet economically. Their economy is largely dependent on their bulb and flower sales to this country. These last year constituted about one third of their total exports. Also the bill constitutes an ironic bread and butter note to the Netherlands for the 600,000 tulip bulbs that their people, through collection of pennies, sent to this country soon after their liberation—at a time when they were still cold, ragged and so hungry many of them would have been glad to have eaten a tulip bulb.

Ben Cohen

Ben Cohen contributed to the plans for peace and the Dumbarton Oaks proposal. During my service as Secretary of State, while attending conferences and in the department, I relied on his wise counsel. This modest unassuming gentleman, with his fine mind and high character, cared little for publicity and less about compensation. He wanted only the opportunity to help promote peace. Ben Cohen deserves the gratitude of those who appreciate unselfish service to the people!

Balkan Casualties

Strike out a zero and divide by two in estimating reports of persons killed in fights or disasters in Eastern Europe, was advice given me years ago by an English correspondent, long resident in Constantinople.

In my experience there, and more recently in Albania, I found the formula sound. They do not mislead one another but are naturally pleased when Europeans and Americans accept their figures.

Doubtless many have been struck by the discrepancy between fact and fiction in dealing with reports from those regions. It occurred to me that this caution might help to confirm some of their deductions.

In a published interview the late Albanian minister, Faik Konitza, gave a surprisingly frank account of this Balkan practice at the time of the invasion of Greece by the Italians during the second World War.

"Coal Contract"

I should like to call to the attention of you and your readers a few excerpts from editorials in The Washington Post on the subject of the recent coal settlement, as well as the negotiations prior to the settlement.

From an editorial, "Mr. Lewis' Demands," on June 2: "Acceptance of the Lewis demands would be much too high a price to pay in order to avert the threat of a coal strike . . . Acceptance of the Lewis wage demands would initiate a fresh round of wage demands from other unions and dash nascent hopes of putting an end to the spiraling rise of living costs that is both cause and consequence of demand for higher wages . . . Still less can we afford to permit a ruthless labor leader to gain his ends . . ."

From an editorial, "Divide and Conquer," on July 9: "Again it is the public that will have to shoulder the cost of the wage and royalty increases . . . to satisfy the insatiable heads of the UMW. . . . If the feared depression does materialize Mr. Lewis and other labor leaders like him will have to take a large share of the blame because of their refusal to moderate their demands in the public interest."

From an editorial, "Coal Contract," on July 14: "After all that has been said about the great concessions wrung from the coal operators by John L. Lewis, it is rather startling to hear that the wage increases follow the pattern set by other industries earlier in the year . . . and in view of the hazards and hardship of the miner's life the new scale of wages is not unreasonably high."

The last editorial is truly a surprising confession of ignorance on the part of the editorial writer regarding a subject he had been treating with pompous authority. Does this mean that Lewis the Tragedian, the Ruthless, the Irresponsible, is not wholly evil? Does it mean that there was justice in Mr. Lewis' demands, before the contract, "in view of the hazards and hardship of the miner's life"? Does it mean further that The Washington Post might better serve its readers by constructive editorials before contracts have been signed, rather than by startling admissions of ignorance of facts after contracts have been approved? PAUL MUNDY.
Washington.

Editor's Note: Our correspondent has torn three sentences out of the context of the editorials in which they occurred. They must be judged against the background of the news at the time. All comment on the coal contract even now has been based on partial information, mainly as a result of the studied silence of Mr. John L. Lewis.

No. 1 editorial, which appeared on June 2, was written after a temporary breaking off in negotiations, on the basis of an operators' statement; which was not controverted by Mr. Lewis. No. 2 editorial, July 9, was written as a warning of increased coal prices as a result of the pending contract.

The third editorial, written with much more data available, was intended to counteract some of the exaggerated statements of increased costs under the new contract. The tendency now, revealed again in the President's Economic Report, is to go to the other extreme, and belittle the cost of the settlement. Nobody, in fact, knows what that will be.

British Press Freedom

I see by the cables from London that the Labor government has become increasingly sensitive to public criticism, particularly through the newspapers. That was to have been expected. Freedom of debate cannot for long be tolerated under a planned or socialistic economy.

There is always the danger that public criticism or debate will compel an important change in some major section of the plan, say with regard to prices or to wages, and thereby upset or ruin the entire scheme. The planners, of course, would not be pleased with that, but would feel it necessary in the best interest of their plan to do everything within their power o forestall this calamity.

The totalitarian planners have found a ridiculously simple answer; they have had only to abolish the freedom of the press. But in England, a country with a liberal tradition of long and hallowed standing, the Labor Party planners obviously cannot deal with the problem in such direct and brutal fashion. They must find some way about. They must, for instance, discover in England's straitened circumstances apparently sound and justificable excuse for restricting the importation of newsprint—and so, quite inevitably, curb and restrain the power of the newspaper to criticize England's new economy.

But let us hope that the English people (and the American people, too, for we have these last 15 years been moving gradually toward a socialized economy) will remember this, that once freedom of the press is gone all other freedoms will stand in the most immediate and dire jeopardy. Indeed, what would our other liberties then be worth?

Admitting Displaced Persons

I wish to express my gratitude for your efforts in support of legislation to admit a substantial portion of the Displaced Persons to this country. Unfortunately the question of admitting immigrants of any sort is surrounded with so many misapprehensions that the truth seldom shines through.

I submit, that contrary to a very prevalent notion the admission of displaced persons would not in the long run amount to a loss or sacrifice on our part but would represent a very great material and spiritual gain. Since 1930 we have not during any one year admitted the total annual quota of 154,000 entries permitted under our immigration laws. So far short of filling the quotas have we been that a total of over 2 million unused entries accumulated between 1930 and 1946.

In support of the assertion that admission of displaced persons as proposed in the Stratton bill would redound to the benefit of this country, I present the following points:

(1) On the basis of a study made by the National Resources Committee it is estimated that even with the admission of 150,000 persons annually there will be a population decline beginning in about 50 years.

(2) Even with the admission of 300,000 persons annually our population will be exceeded by that of the Soviet Union by 1970 by about 90 million. The United States has a mere 259 persons per square mile of arable land in comparison to Great Britain's 2241. Although it may be said that the British situation exceeds the optimum concentration, nevertheless our need is for more people and this is particularly applicable to a great many rural areas. In 1923 the Department of Agriculture estimated that taking into consideration our high standard of living, this country could support 300,000,000 people. With the immigration of as many as 300,000 persons annually, we would have at the turn of the century only 170,000,000 people in this country.

(3) Our population is aging, that is to say the proportion of old people to the total population is increasing. This will inevitably be reflected in a decline in vigor as time goes on. Combine this condition with the fact that great areas of productive or potentially productive land have either been abandoned or never populated and with the fact that without much greater immigration than we now permit our population will begin to decline well before the end of the century, and it seems not unreasonable to suppose that to the rest of the world we shall appear to be playing a very selfish game of dog-in-the-manger.

(4) The skills of the displaced persons would be an asset to this country. Illustrative of this is our need for hardy and willing farm families to reinhabit rural areas and thereby help to restore a sadly needed balance in our excessively urbanized society. For the past several decades one of the most ominous developments in this country has been the desertion of the land by farm families, the disappearance of the independent small farmer, the appearance of a landless rural proletariat, the development of "factories in the field"—the great corporation farms and the concentration of our population in congested urban areas. The European peasant has the experience and hardihood necessary for settlement on the land. We cannot hope to restore our deserted farmsteads and recreate an agrarian culture through the activity, or lack of it, of urbanized Americans.

It would seem, therefore, that by giving the displaced persons an opportunity to survive we shall be increasing our chances of survival.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Red Scare

THE CURRENT Red scare is being whipped up into a kind of typhoon of hysteria. As it whirls, it acquires new momentum, feeding on the perfervid rumors of the frightened, the frustrated and the insecure.

This is a strange way for the most powerful nation in the world to behave. Quite apart from the damage it may do to our own freedoms, it is in itself a threat to security.

To make proper judgments in world issues we must have objective information. We must weigh events calmly and judiciously. That cannot be done in an atmosphere of hysteria.

Here are two examples to show how the scare can work against our own interests. They may be minor, but I believe they are symptomatic of what is happening.

A lesser official in one of the Government agencies returns from eastern Europe with important information about one of Russia's satellites. He has acquired knowledge that puts the satellite country in a more favorable light. Feeling the blast of the Red scare, he asks his chief, half humorously, half seriously, "Do you think they will take me for a Communist over at the State Department when I pass this on?"

One of the keen younger men in the State Department is a liberal about whom there has never been any suspicion of Communist connections. Yet he is given a sense of insecurity and uncertainty by what is happening. He says he understands that in the State Department loyalty check they ask you whether you are in favor of the Taft-Hartley Act and tax reduction. He cannot see what those two purely domestic issues have to do with loyalty to the American form of Government.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT'S loyalty check is continuing. As announced some time ago, 10 employes have been dismissed. A three-man board passes on the recommendations made by the FBI. The board may order a reinvestigation or it may order the employe fired or retained.

The employe is given a hearing before administrative action is taken. He will have a right of public appeal when, and if, the President's over-all loyalty board is set up.

Such a check was undoubtedly necessary. If it had been done quietly and efficiently, within prescribed official limitations, a minimum of harm would have been done. The harm grows out of the innuendo and suspicion that come from a section of Congress and a section of the press.

Witch-hunters in and out of Congress are interested in headlines. The headlines often impede the work of the FBI, which is an efficient technical organization that necessarily works for the most part without publicity. When a congressional committee gets FBI material and then leaks out the information in the hunt for headlines, it is no help to the FBI.

ONE OF the most ominous developments in the Congress now winding up its first session was the attempt on two or three occasions to give the FBI discretionary powers—that is to say, policy-making powers. J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI, does not want such powers. His duty is to carry out policy on the operational level, not to make it.

The Rees loyalty bill passed by the House has been called the greatest single thrust to undermine civil liberties in the history of our country, not even excepting war periods when civil rights were abrogated in whole or in part by military necessity. This description appears to be justified by the wide powers given to a roving loyalty review board and to the Attorney General.

If those who are promoting the Red scare persist in their sensationalism, they may in the end do more harm than could conceivably have been done by the handful of disloyal persons in the Government. They will end by sowing such suspicion and distrust that Government will be gravely handicapped. Men without honest convictions will not work under a cloud of suspicion.

The FBI has repeatedly proved its effectiveness. Congress has given the organization generous appropriations. Sensationalism, hysteria, the blare of publicity are no help to this technical organization.

There are those, of course, who profit from the Red scare. Behind the thin mask of their self-advertised patriotism is the motive of personal gain.

Tables Turned

It is gratifying to note that in Louisville, Ky., Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, a college sorority, awarded a new automobile to the holder of the winning number despite the fact that Alpha Kappa Alpha is manned by Negro women, and the winner of the drawing was a white man.

Though this drawing was held prior to the Ahoskie, N. C., drawing where the winning ticket held by a Negro was considered "unauthorized," the Alpha Kappa Alpha president stuck to her guns by awarding the prize to the winner. In addition, the winner of the new car turned his old car over to the man who sold him the winning ticket, a Negro janitor at a hospital where the winner is a biochemist.

No revenge here! Fair play and gratitude still live.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

The Little Foxes

THE COUNTRY is due for a barrage of pious platitudes about the accomplishments of the departing Congress, from partisans who wish to paint a charming picture. There will be a holy silence, however, about one feature which has been as conspicuous as it is uncharming. In the presence of lobbyists, the Eightieth Congress of the United States has behaved like a blowzy chorus girl just starting on her second pint of rye.

The fact is vitally important, and not merely to the American progressives who can hope that the triumphs of the lobbyists today will prepare for the triumphs of progressivism tomorrow. Sensible American conservatives must realize that holding a lobbyists' carnival at the Capitol is not a wise way to serve long-range conservative interests. Yet at this session, something very like the beginning of a lobbyists' carnival has been plainly discernible.

"You can't take a deep breath around here," remarked one disgusted Republican Senator, "without getting a lungful of utilities lobbyists."

Although the large ranchers, real estate, wool and one of two other lobbies have been rather more conspicuously successful, the best introduction to what has been going on is the story of the blatant power lobby.

The power lobby is the most active, and most conspicuously well-heeled in Washington. Its grand panjandrum, the high-powered P. L. Smith, representative of the National Association of Electrical Companies, gets a salary in the Hollywood class—$65,000 annually, with an ample expense account. But even the prosperous Smith is less important than the numerous officials of the large utilities companies. These converge on the Capitol at frequent intervals to make the boys on the Hill see the power question in "the old, free enterprise way." And behind these larger operators, there is a whole network of lawyers with retainers from the utilities, bankers with deposits from them, and other influential figures. These speak from the voting districts to Washington with voices of authority.

BESIDES stirring up the sordid attack on David E. Lilienthal, the power people have scored major successes at this session with the Appropriations Committees. These committees are a natural field of operations, because of their views on public power held by the two chairmen, roaring old John Taber of New York and his more slick opposite number in the Senate, Styles Bridges of New Hampshire.

Through the Appropriations Committees, in fact, the Federal power program has been put into a slow stall, by snipping here and chopping there at vital projects. The great Bonneville project, for example, is so undermaintained and overloaded that the transformers are literally being cooled by having hoses played on them. Yet the Bonneville construction funds were cut almost in half, and the funds for operation and maintenance reduced from $4,700,000 to $2,500,000. Thus the present thoroughly dangerous condition will continue.

Again, extension of power supply from the Shasta Dam to several important California municipalities was neatly prevented by the simple deletion of funds for a transmission line. And the Southwest Power Administration, which has to contend with especially strong political counterinfluences in its Texas-Oklahoma-Arkansas area, also had its funds for transmission lines drastically cut. Thus the benefits of the national investment in the Dennison and Norfolk Dams, on the Red and White Rivers, will be denied to many potential power users.

THESE achievements at the present session are obviously intended, however, to be only he hors d'oeuvres—the little snacks at the beginning of a much larger meal. For the first time in a good number of years, the more unenlightened utilities leaders have been openly trying to put the clock back with legislation. The result has been a crop of strikingly significant bills—the Rizley bill, to free natural gas from regulation; the Dondero bill, to limit sales of public power and to deprive the public power-minded Interior Department of its jurisdiction; the Thomas bill, which would have the effect of forbidding Government construction of any further transmission lines; and the bills of Representative Miller of Connecticut, which would liberate from regulation large numbers of utilities companies now regulated.

None of these bills has yet passed. But this does not trouble the power people. Their strategy obviously is to put on their real pressure drive later on, when the election is over and, as they hope, an intensively conservative Congress will listen to them even more complacently. In that happy period, the body of Federal power legislation is to be revised.

The public power advocates among Federal officials are to be quietly dropped down the political oubliette. And everything is to be as it was before the hated name of Roosevelt was heard in the land.

Fortunately, such Republican leaders as Senators Vandenberg and Taft show none of the responsiveness of the congressional rank and file to these "little foxes that spoil the vines." But as the party of business, the Republicans have got a very big, very difficult decision to make, because of this onslaught of the little foxes upon Washington.

Conferees Agree on Ending Time-Buying Controls Nov. 1

By The Associated Press

Legislation killing all controls on installment buying on November 1, 1947, was agreed upon yesterday by a Senate-House Conference Committee.

Senator Flanders (R., Vt.), one of the conferees who ironed out differences in legislation passed by the two chambers, told reporters Congress probably would ratify the agreement and send the bill to the White House before the scheduled Saturday adjournment.

The House originally had passed a bill to end the controls immediately. The Senate had proposed to permit some curbs to remain indefinitely but to end others December 31.

The existing controls, which could be continued unchanged until November 1 under the compromise agreement, require one-third down payments, with installments running no longer than 15 months, on automobiles, stoves, mechanical dishwashers, ironers, refrigerators, washing machines, radios and some other goods.

A 20 per cent down payment, with installments limited to 15 months, is required for furniture and rugs.

The agreement to deny the President authority to continue the controls after November 1 followed a White House news conference which resulted in a mistaken belief that he might use his emergency powers to keep them in force.

The curbs were applied in wartime under emergency executive powers. Some time ago the President asked Congress to give him specific authority to continue them. He said he did not believe in using his emergency powers to keep them in effect and, unless he got specific new authority, he would abolish them.

At yesterday's news conference he said, in response to a reporter's questioning, he said he had not promised to end the controls. Federald Reserve Board officials, who administer the regulations, later explained that this was due to a misunderstanding; that he still planned to remove them in the absence of new legislation.

But before the explanation could catch up with the misunderstanding, the Senate-House conferees met. One of them, Representative Wolcott, R., Mich.), said the conferees' decision to kill the controls was precipitated by Mr. Truman's press conference remark.

Federal Reserve officials said the President apparently understood his questioner to refer to all wartime controls.

They said there are other controls—all statutory—such as limitations on stock market operations and reserve requirements, and the President evidently had these in mind in answering the question. The only credit control still in force resting on executive order only, they said, is "regulation W" relating to instlimen buying.

Taft Plans Coast-to-Coast Hearings on Cost of Living

By The Associated Press

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said yesterday a Senate-House committee plans to open coast-to-coast hearings about September 15 on the increase in the cost of living.

The Ohioan told reporters after a meeting of the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report that three or four subgroups will travel to each section of the country to obtain the views of housewives, industry and labor representatives, and others.

"We'll probably have one subcommittee in the East, one in the Midwest, another in the far West and perhaps one more," Taft said.

He added that the joint committee which he heads will go ahead with these plans regardless of whether the Senate approves a resolution by Senator Baldwin (R., Conn.) calling for such an investigation. The Baldwin measure simple directs the committee to make survey, but Taft said it can be undertaken without specific authorization.

Each of the three or four subcommittees will hold hearings in about a half a dozen cities.

Taft said the joint committee discussed the special midyear economic report which President Truman submitted to Congress earlier this week, but will make no official comment on it before February 1. By that time Congress will have received another Presidential report.

As for his own views on the President's report, Taft called it "a very interesting and useful" study. He said that on the whole it was "excellent," but that it had a few "political things" in it. He did not elaborate.

Truman And Congress

By Mark Sullivan

Personal Vs. Political Relations

APPRAISALS of the session of Congress now coming to an end will consist largely of asking and answering a question: With the Republicans in control of Congress, while the President was a Democrat, what was the Republican Congress able to accomplish?

Sullivan

Out of 80 biennial Congresses in the country's history, this is the twenty-eighth in which such division has existed, with one party in the Presidency but not in control of Congress. Always the condition is looked upon with apprehension. It was so last January when this Congress began. Frequently the apprehension has been justified. For the condition usually leads to sharpening of differences between the two parties and this results in frustration, either of Congress by the President or vice versa.

Frustration took place the last time this condition existed, on that occasion in a special form. When President Hoover took office in 1929 he had a Republican Congress. But after the mid-term congressional elections, the Democrats had control of the House during the last two years of Mr. Hoover's term. This was in the very depths of the depression, when emergency legislation was needed, and when therefore cooperation between President and Congress was especially desirable.

BUT IT WAS a time that sharpened political differences. Mr. Hoover, serving a first term, was expected to be reelected and during the latter part of the period became a candidate. The political spirit that arose was expressed in a wisecrack current at the time. It was attributed to a Democratic leader of the House, but may have been, as often, merely an anonymous invention, for plausibility's sake attributed to an appropriate source: "We will do just enough to save the country but short of enough to save Hoover and the Republican Party."

From rancor of such intensity the relation between President Truman and the Republicans in Congress has been utterly free. When Mr. Truman this week made a sentimental journey back to his former seat in the Senate, and was there spontaneously welcomed, the incident, including Mr. Truman's brief address, was at once unprecedented in the history of Congress and a conspicuous evidence of mutual good feeling.

BUT GOOD feeling does not prevent fundamental cleavage. Of this there is a unique record in the history of one measure before this Congress. This measure was voted for seven times, four in the House, three in the Senate. On all seven roll calls the vote in favor of the measure was either above two thirds or approximating two thirds. But that measure did not become law.

The reference is to the tax bill, the course of which is probably unparalleled in the history of Congress. First, it was passed by both branches, then vetoed by the President. Thereupon the House voted almost but not quite the two thirds necessary to override a veto. Subsequently the same bill, changed only as to the date of taking effect, was again introduced, again passed by both branches and again vetoed. Once more, both branches voted on the measure, the House giving the two thirds necessary to override the veto, but the Senate falling slightly short of that number.

Hardly ever, perhaps literally never, was the will of the legislative body and frustration of it by a President so conspicuously illustrated. Another measure, the labor bill, illustrated the same condition—more than two thirds of Congress in favor of it, the President not only vetoing it but striving, vainly as it turned out, to make his veto stick.

The labor bill and the tax bill, it is tenable to say, were the principal measures before this Congress. Both were expected from the Republican Congress when the public elected it last November. In roll call after roll call, in both House and Senate, both measures were supported by either more than two thirds or approximately two thirds. Both were resisted by the President, in one case successfully.

The bearing of this record on the presidential campaign and election next year is obvious.

Dewey Sees Cheyenne Rodeo And Lively Brahma Namesake

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Reporter

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 24.—Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York, leading contender for the Republican presidential nomination in 1948, came to this old cowtown today and saw the world's greatest rodeo.

A wicked-looking Brahma bull, named after Dewey for the occasion, turned out to be a star of the Cheyenne Frontier Days show. "Governor Dewey," the bull, bucked and threw its cowboy rider, Ernie Robeson of Oklahoma, two seconds after coming out of the chute. There were no wild bulls named Taft, Stassen or Vandenberg. Therefore, no comparisons could be made in terms of the 1948 GOP presidential battle.

Governor Dewey, accompanied by Mrs. Dewey (now recovered from oak poisoning) and their two sons, was cheered as he arrived at Frontier Park.

Cheyenne was trying to recapture its hard-riding, hard-drinking past, and making a good job of it. In the saloon of the Plains Hotel, the drinkers were lined up at the bar six deep. A rushing business was being done by DT's liquor store. Outside of DT's was the likeness of a pink elephant, a cocktail held aloft in its trunk.

Politics at Minimum

There was no political haymaking for Governor Dewey on this Cheyenne visit. The familiar trek of Republican leaders to his hotel suite, sometimes bearing pledges of support for the GOP presidential nomination in '48 was missing. In fact, the only political note sounded at all was in an editorial of the Wyoming State Tribune, the State's oldest newspaper. This said:

"Wyoming Republicans have not, by and large, made up their minds concerning who will be their party's strongest nominee for Chief Executive of the Nation.

"They have not gone overboard for anybody.

"Governor Dewey's visit will not change this situation. He will be courteously welcomed here, critically observed, given respectful ear, but whom Wyoming's nine delegates to the Republican national convention next year will support will remain on the 'knees of the gods.'"

Butler's Name Advanced

From Omaha, Nebr., came news that still another favorite son candidate was being groomed for '48. A Washington dispatch in the Omaha World-Herald said that "Nebraska interests" had suggested to Senator Hugh Butler that he become the State's favorite son candidate at Philadelphia next June. Butler said in Washington that he was too busy to commit himself now, but, he added:

"If it is a matter of lining up the State and getting the delegation organized with a view to casting its votes for the proper candidates after the first few ballots, they can use me any way they want me."

The prospect of a legion of favorite son candidates at Philadelphia, with enough delegate strength to deadlock the convention, cannot help be disturbing to the Dewey camp.

Fowler Wins Fight Over Auditing of D. C. Funds

House Provision Which Favored Pilkerton Deleted

District Budget Officer Walter Fowler has won his fight to retain control over District spending.

Final version of the 1948 District Appropriations bill, passed by Congress Tuesday, deleted an original House provision to have Auditor A. R. Pilkerton audit all the bill's funds before payment.

Fowler will retain full powers to allocate and reallocate budget funds.

Although both Fowler and Pilkerton insist there is no "feud" between them, they clashed openly on at least three occasions before the House District Appropriations Subcommittee.

Fowler Charges Meddling

At one point during the subcommittee hearings on the bill, Fowler openly accused Pilkerton's office of meddling in the administration of the Welfare Department.

Commissioners John Russell Young and Guy Mason supported Fowler. Mason also had heated words for Pilkerton over the auditor's request for additional personnel, once demanding that Pilkerton "tell him (the subcommittee chairman) the truth about it."

Here are a few excerpts from the printed proceedings of the subcommittee hearings, which outline the controversy in the principals' own words:

Pilkerton: ". . . I do not have the adequate control over these agencies that I think the auditor's office should have."

"Under the law, if the auditor is to certify to the accounts, he must know in advance that an obligation, when it has been incurred, is a legal obligation and is made in accordance with the law. Also he has to determine that there are sufficient funds on the books of the auditor to pay that contract before it is let."

Fowler's Views Outlined

Fowler: "I think that he should have auditing control but I think that the details of the control of the budget and of the policing of the items in the appropriations should be in the budget office."

"There has been a feeling in the Public Welfare Department that they are being treated differently than all other departments . . . there is, frankly some feeling among the employes that a section in the auditor's office is not only auditing the accounts but is attempting in some way to interfere with running the program, and, to be frank, that is the feeling I have had."

"What we say is that the things that should be audited should be covered, and not spend time on things which do not concern the auditor. He should not be doing the things which devolve upon the Commissioners, as in this instance I think he is attempting to."

Pilkerton Explains Policy

Asked by Representative Karl Stefan (R., Nebr.) why he did not have his books set up on a project basis, Pilkerton replied:

"Mr. Stefan, as you know, under the budget regulations . . . the budget officer acting for the Commissioners may shift the money around as he sees fit. Now what is the object in my setting up projects, covering some 800 accounts, when they are subject to change every month?"

Commissioner Mason took issue with Pilkerton when he testified he'd advised the Commissioners that a Welfare Department request for deficiency funds was higher than necessary.

"Did you advise the Commissioners that in your opinion there was too much money being requested?" Mason demanded. "Did you advise me? I say that you did not give that advice to me."

(Subcommittee Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.) intervened at this point to ask a question.)

Commissioner John Russell Young denied that Fowler was seeking to take Pilkerton's job. "We want Mr. Fowler's office to be a little more than just a budget office," he declared. "We want him to contribute to the efficiency of the District of Columbia."

Edgewood Corporal Indicted in Murder

Decatur, Ill., July 24 (AP).—Corpl. Robert Earl Moore, 20, of Edgewood, Md., was indicted for murder today in the $20 holdup slaying of a taxicab driver June 13. Moore formerly was stationed at Chanute Field, Rantoul, north of Decatur. He was arrested June 19 at Hamilton Field, Calif., while en route to overseas service. Macon County Sheriff A. C. Ammann said Moore signed a statement that he shot James K. Casey of Decatur in a robbery attempt.

Strike Continues

Ice Cream Negotiators Deadlocked

Efforts to end the two-day walkout of AFL employes in seven Washington ice cream plants ended in a "deadlock" late yesterday. Truck drivers are also out in sympathy.

Federal Conciliators James Holden and James J. O'Bryne, who brought union and management negotiators together for more than three hours' of talks at the Labor Department, announced at 6:30 p. m. that "no agreement has been reached."

Ford Young, chairman of the employe relations committee of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association's ice cream section, reported "a little progress was made" and another session "probably" will be held today on the other seven plants.

The 250 striking members of Bakery and Confectionery Workers Local 118 (AFL) will meet at 1 p. m. in Laborers' Hall, 523 New Jersey ave. nw., to be brought up to date on negotiations, Charles B. McClosky, business agent, said.

The union is seeking a 15 per cent increase over the 70 cents an hour now paid unskilled workers and the $1.12 hourly pay scale for skilled employes.

State Petitions Opening of Roads Into Shenandoah

Madison, Va., July 24.—The Conservation Commission this week placed resolutions in the hands of the National Park Service recommending the opening of the "Hoover Road" in Madison County and the "Red Gate" Road in Page County.

The two roads would give easier access to the Shenandoah National Park. The Hoover Road leads from Criglersville in Madison County, and the Red Gate Road formerly known as the New Market-Gordonsville Turnpike leads from Stanley in Page County.

The two roads were blocked by locked gates in 1938 because the National Park Service was not provided funds for maintenance and fee stations. Entrance fees are now charged.

Maryland Veterans Can Pick Up Medals

Norfolk, Va., July 24 (AP).—Maryland veterans will be able to pick up medals to go with their American defense service and World War II victory ribbons at three Navy recruiting stations.

The Fifth Naval District said the medals would be issued upon presentation of proper credentials in Baltimore, Hagerstown and Cumberland. Applications may also be made by mail to the district headquarters.

Parade, Show at Center

A costume parade, doll and hobby show, and craft exhibit will be held at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase recreation center tomorrow at 10 a. m. Sponsor is the recreation department of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Attorneys Rush to Save OPA Suits

File 3000 Petitions To Erase Porter's Name and Prevent Loss of Millions

The Justice Department took action yesterday to salvage several million dollars worth of OPA treble damage suits which may have been invalidated by a District Court decision here.

Throughout the Nation, United States attorneys were filing petitions to erase the name of Paul Porter and insert "United States of America" on some 3000 OPA suits. In Washington alone 127 of these petitions were filed yesterday.

Result of Morris Ruling

Cause of these operations is a ruling of Justice James W. Morris of District Court earlier this month. He said that under established law, if an agency of the Government sues in the name of its administrator and another administrator takes over, the latter's name must be used as the plaintiff.

In local cases, the OPA filed numerous suits during the period Chester Bowles was administrator of the price control agency. Some of these suits have never been decided, but OPA attorneys neglected to change the name of the plaintiff in these cases to Paul A. Porter who succeeded him. Then, when the Office of Temporary Controls was established under Philip B. Fleming last December, there was still no change of name.

Action May Be Too Late

The Justice Department took over OPA litigation in June. But, even at that time the year's period allowed under the statute of limitations to file OPA actions had passed in most cases. The special six-month period to substitute plaintiffs under court rules is also over.

If Justice Morris' opinion prevails, Justice Department spokesmen say, the belated change of plaintiff will be futile.

An appeal is now being taken in the United States Court of Appeals here to contest Justice Morris' ruling. Locally the cases are handled by Assistant United States Attorneys Sidney S. Sachs and John Lane. The national situation is under Shelton Bernstein, attorney in the Justice Department.

Review Ordered In Md. Sales Tax Conviction

Snow Hill, Md., July 24 (AP).—Circuit Judge Edmond H. Johnson today ordered Ocean City Magistrate James Robbins to produce records in the case of Benjamin Shoemaker, first businessman convicted of violating the Maryland retail sales tax law.

Judge Johnson issued a writ of certiorari returnable August 1 when the conviction will be reviewed. Shoemaker was convicted of refusing to obtain the $1 license for collecting the tax.

Harry Cropper, Shoemaker's attorney, said he will test the tax division ruling that the entire Ocean City boardwalk is considered the premises of concessionaires. Shoemaker, a frozen custard stand operator, contended he was not obliged to collect the tax under the State ruling that food consumed off premises is exempt.

Woman Dies of Auto Injuries; Six Navy Men Hurt in Truck

Deaths this date last year 33
D. C. traffic toll, 1946 72

On yesterday's traffic front a 70-year-old District woman died as the result of an earlier auto accident and six Navy enlisted men were injured, two critically, in a truck mishap.

Miss Ellem M. Wilson, 70, of 1801 Argonne pl. nw., died at 10:55 a. m. at Emergency Hospital from injuries received when struck by a car Tuesday, 4:55 p. m., at Little Harvard st. and Columbia rd. nw.

The Navy men, from Anacostia Receiving Station, were hurt when their sand-laden dump truck left the highway and overturned on Central ave., near Largo, Md., yesterday afternoon.

While crossing from between parked cars, Miss Wilson was hit by a car driven by George Pearson, 29, 2717 Chesapeake st. nw., according to police.

She was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a fractured right leg, bruised left hip, brush burns, scalp lacerations and contusions.

The driver was released on a technical charge in the custody of his attorney. The car was owned by Mrs. Estelle McGrath, wife of Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), according to police. Neither was in the car when the accident occurred.

The traffic victim was the widow of Army Capt. H. L. Wilson, who died February, 1936. Surviving is one daughter, Mrs. Beatrice Wilson Baker of White Plains, N. Y.

Most seriously injured in the Largo, Md., accident were Seaman 1/c Charles E. Bauman, 19, and Seaman 2/c James W. Sims, 20, both of whom were admitted to Prince Georges County Hospital with fractured skulls and other undetermined injuries.

Bauman later was transferred to the Naval Medical Center, Bethesda.

The other four occupants, all of whom were removed to the Receiving Station dispensary after treatment at Prince Georges Hospital for bruises and abrasions were:

Seaman 1/c Bradley Burns, 23, driver of the truck; Seaman 2/c Henry K. Williamson, 17; Seaman 1/c Don Steiff, 22, and Seaman 2/c James R. Ditto, 17.

According to Prince Georges County police Burns told them he swerved sharply to the right to avoid an oncoming automobile which was trying to pass another car. He said he lost control of the truck when the wheels hit a soft-shoulder in the road.

The heavy vehicle careened for more than 200 feet through heavy underbrush alongside the road. In its wild course it sheared off a power pole, plowed up a small tree, which is carried 45 feet, before overturning on its right side. The speedometer was jammed at the figure 75.

The front-wheel assembly was torn away from the body of the truck.

Sims was pinned under the body of the truck for nearly half an hour after the accident and was finally extricated by passers-by who raised the 3½-ton truck by man power high enough to allow him to be freed.

The Navy truck was en route from a sand pit near Annapolis, Md., for a construction project at the receiving station. Prince Georges police said no charges had been lodged against the men.

Maryland Man's Arm Sheared Off in Crash

The left arm of William S. Odell, 40, Deal, Md., was sheared off at the shoulder by a car passing from the opposite direction yesterday. The two cars sideswiped on a curve of the Prince Frederick highway, about 3 miles east of Upper Marlboro, Md.

Williams was taken to Prince Georges County General Hospital, Cheverly, Md. No one in the other car was seriously injured, police said.

Accident Fines Total $150

A 30-year-old District motorist was assessed fines totaling $150 in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday on charges of reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident which resulted in injuries to a 12-year-old boy.

The defendant, Earle Jones, of 3310 Crawford pl. se., was fined $50 and costs on the reckless driving charge and $100 for leaving the scene of an accident. According to police, his auto struck John Conte of Glen Arden, Md., on Palmer Memorial hwy., near Huntsville last October, and he then abandoned the car at the scene. The boy, who suffered a broken leg, is still under a doctor's care, police said.

Public to See Private, State Lincoln Papers

Library of Congress To Display 15,000 Items First Time

Private and State papers of Abraham Lincoln will be exposed to world scrutiny for the first time tomorrow at the Library of Congress here where they have been sealed for 21 years.

An estimated 15,000 items are preserved in the collection which was turned over to the Library of Congress in 1926 at the wish of the martyred President's son, Robert Todd Lincoln. The documents were originally gathered and sealed in 1907 by the son.

Lincoln scholars and Civil War authorities warned the public yesterday that the papers would probably not reveal anything sensational, since most of them had been examined by Lincoln biographers before they were sealed from immediate posterity.

None, however, belittled the interest they would prove to collectors of Lincolnania.

Articles by Sandburg

Carl Sandburg, author of The Prarie Years and one of America's foremost experts on Lincoln, will describe for readers of The Washington Post the importance and significance of the papers. His articles will appear in The Washington Post commencing Sunday.

Yesterday, Herbert Wells Fay, 87-year-old custodian of Abraham Lincoln's tomb, in Springfield, Ill., said the collection "may contain letters from people who were angry at Lincoln."

John Nicolay, a Lincoln aide, Fay said, told him that some of the papers were letters from people angry at the President. They said things the authors would have been very ashamed of the next day, the custodian said he was told.

"Most of them are routine State papers," said Jay Monaghan, head of the Illinois State Historical Society, who will be present at the collection's opening. However, Monaghan said the letters might show who sought to exert pressure on the President "to do certain things."

May Be Very Important

"That, you will see, may be very, very important," said the historian.

Louis S. Taylor, 75, of Chicago, executive vice president of the Pullman Co., who helped put the papers in order before they were sealed in 1907, said the collection may prove valuable to Civil War historians.

The Library of Congress, in secret assembly line method, had the papers microfilmed so that reproductions may be sent to schools and institutions early next week. A set of the film will cost $645, the library said.

Policeman Fired for Attacking Legislator

Plea for 50 More Men for Capitol Force Is Rejected By House Group

A Capitol Hill policeman attacked a member of Congress and was summarily fired, it was disclosed yesterday.

The revelation was made by William F. Russell, House sergeant at arms, in testimony before a House Appropriations subcommittee considering his plan for an increase of 50 policemen to the Capitol force.

His plea was rejected.

At about the same hour the House subcommittee had been considering the police question, on Wednesday, a 39-year-old veteran, Clifton R. H. Spires, of Augusta, Ga., was arested in the Senate wing for flashing a .25-caliber pistol.

Looking for "Big Shots"

Spires, sent to Gallinger Hospital for observation, was given a disability discharge from the Army on May 28, 1942, after being inducted in January of 1941. He said he came to Washington to look up "some big shots."

Russell's request for additional police also was based on a shooting attack on Senator John Bricker (R., Ohio) by a disgruntled constituent in the Capitol Hill subway July 12.

The sergeant at arms, testifying on dismissal of the policeman who attacked the House member, did not identify either during the hearing, which took place Wednesday in a closed session. Neither would he "name names" for reporters.

He did say, however, that the Representative was not struck by a blackjack and that the incident arose from the guard's failure to recognize the Representative when he sought to use a Capitol telephone.

The Senate sergeant at arms, Edward F. McGinnis, who is also chairman of the Capitol Police Board, supported Russell's request for approximately $60,000 to expand the force.

The subcommittee recommended an increase of 25 police Wednesday night, but yesterday morning the full Appropriations Committee met and eliminated the item altogether.

On the floor of the House, during debate on the second supplemental appropriations bill yesterday, Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) asserted that even "if we had 500 policemen," the Capitol force could not stop the shooting at Senator Bricker. He added that no number of policemen could prevent the shooting at a House member.

Testimony before the subcommittee disclosed, according to Russell, that there are not enough men to properly guard the Capitol subways. Senator Bricker was shot at in the Senate subway. The sergeant at arms added there is a definite need for some kind of a communications or alarm system.

Legislator Hits Number Of Police at Ball Games

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) thinks there are too many Metropolitan Police on detail at the Griffith Stadium ball games.

He believes that policing the ball park is not a proper function of the Metropolitan Department inasmuch as the stadium is a commercial enterprise run for profit. As such, the Congressman feels the stadium ought to hire its own special police.

Representative Auchincloss made his observation yesterday during hearings on home rule for the District. He is chairman of the subcommittee conducting the investigation. He is also a former New York deputy police commissioner, He is furthermore a baseball fan, and a former varsity pitcher—Yale '08.

2678 Police Attend Games

Earlier hearings by the House Appropriations Subcommittee on District Expenditures disclosed that Griffith Stadium pays but $5 a year for a license to operate. During the fiscal year 1946, the Metropolitan Department assigned 2678 police to the ball park, at a cost of $21,000. The Corporation Counsel's Office is understood to be drafting legislation to license Griffith Stadium based on the basis of service rendered, or about $17,000 per year.

The question of regular police details assigned to Griffith Stadium, including by inference Uline and Turner's Arenas, came up during a discussion of the District Boxing Commission before Auchincloss' subcommittee yesterday.

The law provides that one of the three members of the local boxing commission be a representative of the Police Department.

Harvey L. Miller, commission chairman, commented that the police member of the commission helped prevent "an influx of gamblers and shady gamblers" into the boxing game.

"Police Responsibility"

Auchincloss in turn offered the opinion that it was up to the police to keep out the "shady characters" whether or not one of their members was a member of the boxing commission.

The hearings yesterday heard spokesmen for a group of local boards which are self-supporting. Represented were, besides the boxing commission, the Licensure Commission on Healing Arts, Real Estate Commission, Nurses Examining Board.

Greater Suburban Sanitary District Would Add Five Cities, Extend to Bay

Expansion of facilities of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission to provide water service and sewage disposal to a 980-square-mile area was foreseen this week by commission engineers.

The proposed greater sanitary district, predicted on increasing needs, would take in Annapolis, Darnestown, Laytonsville, Ellicott City, Marlboro and Waldorf.

Key to the expansion program would be construction of a 110-feet high dam on the Patuxent River above Rocky Gorge and the doubling of the capacity of the present Rocky Gorge pumping station.

Harry B. Shaw, commission deputy chief engineer, outlined the expansion possibilities Tuesday before the annual conference of the American Water Works Association, at San Francisco, Calif. The plan highlighted a joint report of Shaw and Harry R. Hall, commission chief engineer, covering the 28 years of operations of the Sanitary Commission.

Commissioners Attend

Commission Chairman Dwight B. Galt and Commissioner Lacy Shaw are also attending the conference.

An expanded sanitary district to include Annapolis and the other five population areas "could well be served with water by the expansion of the Sanitary Commission's development of the Patuxent River," Deputy Chief Engineer Shaw told the conference.

In certain Maryland areas south of Washington and along the Potomac River, an artesian water supply "might be more practical," the engineers said.

The Washington Suburban Sanitary district, at its incorporation 28 years ago, included 95 square miles, 41 in Montgomery County and 54 in Prince Georges County with a population of 32,000 and an assessable basis of 20 million dollars. Today there are 198 square miles with over 200,000 population and 238 million dollars in assessable valuation.

Hooked Up With D. C.

The commission confines its services to Maryland but, under a hookup with the District water system, can give or receive water if either area needs emergency flow.

Demand Hits Peak for Md. Park Cabins

Annapolis, Md., July 24 (AP).—Demand for cabin reservations at State parks is greater than ever this year, Edward B. Ballard, new park planning chief, disclosed today.

He said the demand momentarily had outstripped the supply of cabins and that the public was using in greater numbers the picnic and swimming facilities, especially at Elk Neck State Park and in the Big Savage State Forest areas.

While a long-range park planning program is being considered, Ballard said, "we want to make available to as many people as possible present facilities for recreation."

He listed in the order of importance to the department: picnic and swimming facilities, overnight camping sites and permanent cabins to be let to vacationists.

"The State has been hampered during the war by lack of help and funds for park work," he said. "We have been granted funds for five more park guards, needed to assist the public in our recreation spots."

He said much remained to be done with present recreation areas.

Farm Wages In Virginia At New High

Richmond, Va., July 24 (AP).—Wages paid for farm labor in the State on July 1 were the highest on record, the Cooperative Crop Reporting Service said today.

The crop service, in announcing that the wage peak was the highest since it started keeping records in 1909, said farm labor pay per month with board on July 1 amounted to $66.50. On July 1 of last year workers received $61.

Wages without board on July 1, 1947 amounted to $86.25, which compared with $80.75 at the same time last year.

Wages by the day with board amounted to $3.50, the same as on July 1, 1946, and without board were $4.30, 10 cents higher than the 1946 figure.

The crop service said the previous high wages were paid in 1920 and amounted to $36.10 per month with board and $51.60 without. By the day farm workers in 1920 received $2.20 with board and $2.68 without.

Police Recruiting a Success

By The Associated Press

The recruiting drive of the Maryland State police yesterday was termed a "tremendous success" by Karl F. Steinmann, executive chairman of the committee conducting the drive.

Although the campaign, which opened July 18, will not end until August 2, Steinmann indicated committee members were well pleased with response to the program.

Col. Beverly Ober, superintendent of the force, said Monday there had been more than 1000 applications for the 35 vacancies.

The Maryland State Employment Commission said applications would be accepted for 20 days after the close of the recruiting drive.

Wife Beater Can't Wait

Baltimore, July 24 (AP).—John Sczurowski, 41, couldn't wait until he got the missus home. He couldn't even wait until he got her out of court.

The missus had John up yesterday on a wife-beating charge. Magistrate Frank J. Schap heard her complaint. He gave John a lecture. John said he'd behave. The judge told them to go home.

Just as they reached the door together, witnesses testified today, John let her have it in the middle with his elbow.

27 Killed In Md. Traffic During June

Baltimore, July 24 (AP).—Reporting that 27 persons were killed in Maryland traffic accidents in June, the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission noted today a "gratifying" improvement in the State's highway fatality record.

There were 34 traffic deaths in May of this year and 36 in June of 1946.

For the first six months of 1947 there were 177 killed and 4093 injured. In the corresponding period of 1946 there were 198 killed and 3910 injured.

The number of accidents reported in the first six months of 1947 showed an increase of 8114. There were 7634 in the like period of 1946.

The safety commission noted a big drop in the number of pedestrians killed last month. Two thirds of the State's traffic fatalities usually are in this category. Last month there were but four. In the same month last year there were 13.

Four of those killed last month met death in Baltimore.

There were no deaths at all in nine of the 23 counties—Calvert, Caroline, Cecil, Charles, Dorchester, Kent, St. Mary's, Washington and Wicomico.

Talbot County, on the Eastern Shore, had the worst record for the month, with four fatalities.

Allegany had two, as did Baltimore County. Howard, Prince Georges, Queen Anne and Somerset. Anne Arundel, Carroll, Frederick, Garrett, Harford, Montgomery and Worcester had one each.

During Year

Md. Spends 9 Millions For Supplies

Annapolis, Md., July 24 (AP).—The stature of the State government as a consumer—$9,779,506 worth of purchases a year—was shown today in a report by Budget Director Walter N. Kirkman to Governor Lane.

The State's grocery bill was a sizable chunk of cash—$891,238 during the fiscal year ending July 1. In this same period it bought $724,024 worth of cured and fresh meats on a monthly basis and $313,525 worth on a weekly basis.

The food was used in the various State institutions, which also got $158,970 worth of house furnishing during the year.

Among the more unusual purchases listed by Kirkman was $5204 for musical instruments and $9080 for arms and ammunition.

Plenty of letter writing could be done on the $69,374 worth of stationery, and the printing bill alone came to $36,715.

During the fiscal year the State acquired $143,527 worth of surplus property, and Kirkman found the Board of Public Works helpless to provide him more money to obtain other such bargains from the Federal Government.

Dairy Cattle Breeders Plan 11 Md. Shows

By The Associated Press

Nearly 1000 head of cattle are expected to be shown at a series of 11 field days and shows to be sponsored in late July and early August by four dairy cattle breed associations in Maryland.

Ralph Porterfield, extension dairyman at the University of Maryland, College Park, said the field days were designed to aid the State's dairymen in improving their herds.

He outlined special classes in which 4-H club boys and girls would be invited to show their livestock and said ribbons and prizes would be awarded.

One of the field days will feature an "all-breed show" at Galena on August 1 for breeders of Ayshires, Holstein and Jersey stock.

Shows are also planned for Ayrshires at Ellicott City on August 14; for Holsteins at Sigler's Grove on August 12; for Guernseys at Hagerstown on July 26, at the University of Maryland on August 13, at the Pioneer Point farm near Centreville August 16, and at the Marshall Wilson farm near Bel Air on August 15.

Jersey breeders already have participated in two field days and have a third scheduled for the Indian Spring farm at Darlington.

SHIRLINGTON — ONE OF THE NATION'S LARGEST BUSINESS CENTERS

SHIRLINGTON CORPORATION Joseph Cherner, Pres. HObart 5000

Counting Pennies with Carolyn

It's Friday evening—stores are closed—what to do about those records you need for your Saturday night party? Hop in the car, of course, and head over the smooth Shirley Highway for Shirlington, where the shops stay open till 9 Friday nights, all day Saturday till 6.

What a pleasure it is to bowl along over the broad, white road, free of traffic, minus stop lights all the way to Shirlington. Your very first stop is when you slide your car to the curb in the Shirlington Business Center . . . without a minute's wait for someone to pull out first, or driving around and around the block. For at Shirlington, there's always plenty of parking space, right in the midst of all the shops.

If you're a Virginia resident, while you're shopping is a perfect time to have your car inspected. Drive right into Shirlington Motors, Lincoln and Mercury dealers with a modern, completely equipped automatic repair shop, and an authorized Virginia inspection station.

You've certainly picked a value-packed week-end to shop at Shirlington. Now's the chance of a summer to pick up several charming, cool dresses for a song in Nugent's summer sale. You'll find a wide and varied selection of hard-to-find half sizes, 18½ to 24½, at this delightfully air-conditioned shop. Prints, pastels, rayon sheers, cotton seersuckers and gingham in a variety of styles, formerly $8.99 to $14.99, are now as little as $5 to $9.99, and playsuits are down to $3, $4 and $5. What a grand opportunity for vacation goers!

About food for your party. You'll find your whole menu at Shirlington Super Market. There's plenty in the way of practical and delicious suggestions at the new seafood counter, frozen and fresh. Crabmeat, fresh shrimp, lobster . . . what will you have? Everything is so easy to find, so temptingly displayed. You'll decide to do all your week-end marketing while there.

Ice cream always makes a party. Pittle's Bakery has it—Breyer's by the gallon at $1.95, if the crowd is going to be large. People come from all over Virginia and Maryland to get this ice cream. It sells for 70c a quart, or 37c a pint. Take home one of Pittle's home-baked berry pies, made with fresh-frozen fruits for juicy perfection. It's a right nice finishing touch for Sunday dinner. Don't forget your rolls for the party, and salt-rising bread and meringue shells for your neighbor who wasn't able to come along, before you leave this friendly bakery with the delicious things to eat.

And now, for those records . . . your reason for coming shopping. You'll discover the Shirlington Drug Store is very proud of its new and complete record department, where you'll find popular classics, the latest hits, and all the tunes to make your party fun. While you're there, ask to sniff Schiaparelli's sophisticated "Shocking," demure "Sleeping," or outdoorsy "Salut." Nothing gives you more of a party lift than new perfume. And nothing makes a more charming party prize than a box of Schiaparelli's Disposable Bath Sponges . . . all for $1.75, tax free. This drug store is a model in layout and design, as well as one of the largest in the East.

Everything is arranged so that you can see what you want at a glance, and after your shopping tour, you're likely to head for the lunch counter or tables in a hurry. How inviting it looks, just asking you over for a refreshing drink or a snack before starting home.

Now, aren't you looking forward to your Shirlington visit?

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IN CHICAGO last week, Mr. Harry Groves gave Herbie (Biff) Jones a final pat on the back and sent him out to do battle against Johnny Nichols in the top preliminary of the Zale-Graziano card. Two minutes later, Groves was preparing the water bucket for the end of Round One when Mr. Bobby O'Dowd spoke up in Jones' corner. Mr. O'Dowd, a Chicago character who was drafted for duty as one of Jones' seconds, observed:

POVICH

"That's a mighty good-looking fighter you got."

Groves agreed, and said, "He'll do all right," whereupon O'Dowd said, "You ain't kidding. He's done all right, all ready."

When Groves looked up he saw Nichols stretched on his face in a neutral corner, and Jones with his gloves on his hips. Nichols attempted to rise at the count of eight, pitched forward on his face again, and was counted out.

"I guess he hit him with that straight left," said Manager Groves, expressing no surprise, and then he hopped into the ring to welcome his Biffer back to the corner.

MR. GROVES THINKS he has a considerable fighter in his 19-year-old Herbie Jones, who stepped out of the amateurs in Washington and has won 35 of his 39 professional fights thus far. Groves is an old fighter himself, who quit when he discovered that old fighters don't win many fights.

He has Jones matched with Johnny Bratton, the Chicago lightweight, at Griffith Stadium on August 4, and he thinks Jones will do all right against Bratton who has licked Danny Kapilow, Ike Williams, Willie Joyce and Cleo Shans. He thinks Jones is something very special in the lightweight division, and he hand-picked Bratton as the kid's opponent.

"The fight will be good for Herbie whether he wins or loses," says Groves. "Bratton's a boxer who isn't going to hurt him. That's why we signed. Herbie's going to be a good fighter for a long time, but there's no hurry with him. I want him in there with a smart boxer who will turn him around and tie him up and maybe make a monkey out of him a little bit. That's when Herbie will begin to learn things for himself."

LOU JAMESON, the original manager of Jones in the amateurs, called Groves in as comanager after Herbie won his first three pro fights, and asked Groves to "make a pro out of this kid. He loves to fight and hits like a mule." Groves moved in and took charge, but there were misgivings at the outset. He didn't like the match that put Jones in with Jimmy McAllister, who had just boxed a draw with Featherweight Champion Willie Pep.

"I was agraid Herbie was in over his head," said Groves, "and he knew I was worried. At the weighing-in, Herbie sidled up alongside of McAllister and looked him up and down, and then he comes to me and said, 'Stop worrying, Harry, I can lick this guy.' That's what he did, too, and I knew I had a lot of fighter to work with.

"I don't have to "sic" Herbie onto anybody. My problem is to slow him up. He wants to belt everybody out in the first round, if he can. I tell him he's only 19 and he'll be a better fighter when he's 21 or 22, but he says he's grown up already. That don't go, though. If he gets over this Bratton fight, I'm going to put him back in the preliminaries where he won't get hurt. We don't take this Bratton fight if we ain't obligated to Gabe Menendez, who gives us our first shot at the big money."

JONES IS A DIFFERENT kind of southpaw, Groves observes. "He's not like Lew Tendler and Bruce Flowers or the other southpaws who laid back with their lefts looking for the spot to throw it. He's faster with it. His feet are slow but his hands are fast. He wants to crawl all over everybody he's in with. Aaron Perry, Henry Armstrong and Lou Ambers had a shot at Lew Hanbury and beat him, but Herbie's the only fighter who ever stretched him out for the 10-count."

Groves has been training fighters ever since he quit the ring in 1932, after nine years at it. He stopped fighting when he became a trainer, he says, "because the kids don't have any respect for you if they see you get licked.' ' Groves fought one Jack Cody 13 times in the bootleg boxing days around Washington, at Berwyn, Kenilworth, Portners' Arena and Washington Barracks. His top purse was $100.

"The roughest fight I ever had was fought at Jimmy Fontaine's. Only 50 people saw it out at his place. Jimmie paid Andy Bowen and me $100 each to battle it out in private for his friends. It almost paid our doctor bills after the fight."

Two Jockeys Suspended at Bel Air

Yanks Slam 20 Hits, Trim Browns, 14-5

New York, July 24 (AP).—The high-flying Yankees burst loose with 9 runs in the first two innings today and continued to belabor St. Louis Brown pitching until they had piled up a 14-to-5 victory over the American League cellar dwellers and made it two out of three for the series.

Johnny Lindell, Tommy Henrich and George McQuinn contributed homers to the 20-hit assault against three St. Louis flingers as Vic Raschi, coast league rookie, racked up his third straight win since being recalled from Portland.

Two for Health

Two of the Browns' nine blows off Paschi were circuit smashes by Heff Heath, his 18th and 19th of the season. He finished the day in a tie for the league lead with Ted Williams of Boston, who hit his 19th against Chicago. Walt Judnich smashed his 12th homer of the year fro the losers.

In addition to his two big blows, Heath collected a single and two walks for a perfect day at the plate. Joe DiMaggio of the Yanks rapped a double and two singles to extend his current batting streak through 12 straight games.

Bosox Again Beat Hapless Chisox, 8-2

Boston, July 24 (AP).—Coming from behind, the Boston Red Sox today whacked out an 8-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox to sweep a three-game series and maintain a record of never having been beaten at home this year by the white hosed Chicagoans.

Boston's Ted Williams and Chicago's Luke Appling hit home runs.

For Luke Appling it was his seventh, the most the veteran infielder ever has hit in a single season. In two other years—1933 and 1936—Luke, who now is in his seventeenth active Major League season, hit six four-baggers.

There Was a Fourth

The War Department, it seems, should remember the "Forgotten Man"—the fourth guy in West Point's undefeated backfield last year—but apparently it doesn't.

The phone in The Washington Post sports department rang yesterday. A sweet but timid young thing half whispered:

"This is the War Department calling. We're having a little discussion and maybe you can settle it. Who was the fourth man in Army's backfield last year besides Davis, Blanchard and Tucker?"

(Yeah, we know who he is. Do You?)

Feller Downs Athletics, 6-1, For 12th Win

Philadelphia, July 24 (AP).—Bob Feller today became the first American League pitcher to score 12 victories this season, letting the Philadelphia Athletics down with five safeties as his Cleveland Indian mates banged out a 6-1 triumph before 19,204 at Shibe Park.

Feller, fanning five and walking two, missed a shutout when Hank Majeski opened the A's fifth with a triple to center and Barney McCosky brought him home with a fly to the same garden.

The Indians shelled Bill McCahan and Joe Coleman for 15 hits, including three singles by George Metkovich. The first of these was lumped with a two-bagger by Dale Mitchell, an infield out by Hank Edwards and a long fly by Lou Boudreau for two runs at the start.

Successive raps by Jim Hegan, Feller and Metkovich brought in another tally in the second, while two more crossed in the fifth when Eddie Robinson doubled, Joe Gordon singled, Ed Bockman flied, Hegan grounded out and Eddie Joost erred on Feller's roller. Gordon lashed his sixteenth homer of the season in the seventh.

It's Derby Day For Turtles At Boys' Club

THE kids and their turtles will have a big time today when the Boys' Club of Washington holds a terrapin derby in the club gym at 17th and Massachusetts ave. se.

The terrapin will go to their marks at 2 o'clock. About 25 will compete. Just like horses in the Kentucky Derby, the terrapins will wear numbers

The distance will be 15 feet. Each terrapin jockey will be allowed to use a prod to keep his entry in line and spur him on.

No rough stuff will be allowed. Any turtle that snaps at a rival will be penalized a foot.

Any turtle that refuses to run will be disqualified after five minutes.

If all the turtles are too tired to move, tempting morsels will be used to urge them on.

The only experienced terrapin in the derby is one known as George, owned by John Brown, 11, of 1540 D st. se. George once covered the length of the gymnasium, 84 feet, in two days.

But speed is the essence in today's race, and George may turn out to be nothing more than a marathon runner.

Cards Climb Into Third, 3-2

St. Louis, July 24 (AP).—Stan Musial, who wore the goat's horns while the St. Louis Cardinals floundered in the cellar during the first two months of the season, lashed a tenth-inning single today scoring Red Schoendienst with the run that boosted the defending champs into third place by a 3-2 victory over the New York Giants.

It was the third straight St. Louis win for a sweep of the series.

The 'Riot Act'

Boudreau Scolds His Indians —Takes Away Sandwiches

PHILADELPHIA, July 24 (AP).—Manager Lou Boudreau admitted today he had subjected his slumping Cleveland Indians to the most strongly-worded lecture of his managerial career in a clubhouse meeting before last night's game with the Philadelphia Athletics.

"I told the fellows that one of two things is wrong," Boudreau said. "Either they're too tired to give their best efforts, or they've decided that the season is over and all they have to do is go through the motions the rest of the way.

"Well, I'm pretty tired myself, but I'll be d.... if I'll as long as I can stand on two feet. And the season isn't over. We haven't played much more than half our schedule. Anything can happen The Yankees are starting to find their level after that winning streak. I'm not saying that we can win the pennant, or even finish second. But we can play better ball than we have been playing, and if we do, you can't tell what might happen."

* * * *

BOUDREAU told his men that in the future they will not be served sandwiches and beverages in the clubhouse after the games.

"We don't have any disciplinary problems," he explained later. "If we did, I'd slap on some fines. But I'm cutting out the refreshments just by way of letting the boys know that I'm not happy about the way they've been performing lately."

Boudreau passed up batting practice to hold last night's meeting.

One of the Tribal veterans said "I've been with this club a long time but no manager ever has laid the cards on the table the way Lou did last night. He not only read the riot act. He named names. It was strictly a case of 'if the shoes fit, wear it.'"

The Indians apparently were not immediately inspired for they lost last night's game to the Athletics by a 6 to 3 count, then came back today for a 6-1 triumph.

One Rider Allegedly Bet Against Himself, Other Bought Ticket

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., July 24.—Two jockeys, one accused of betting on a mount other than his own, were suspended for the meeting here today. Jockey Fred Kratz, former steeplechase rider, was alleged to have wagered against himself in yesterday's eighth race. Jockey Linwood Bakhsh was set down for buying the ticket for Kratz.

In ordering the suspension as well as referring the case to the Maryland Racing Commission, the stewards did not disclose how the deal was detected. However, the Bel Air track is covered by the "Racing FBI."

It was reported that Kratz, who rode the Jay Cee stable's H. R. Kerns, a 62-1 shot in the race, had Bakhsh buy him a win ticket on A. S. Moore's Balloon, which finished second to Alan T. Clarke's Gallant Doc, the $43 winner.

H. R. Kerns showed some early speed and finished last in the field of 10.

Kratz had occasional success while performing at the Charles Town meeting, and Baksh, at the same track, was injured early in the session and accepted a few mounts.

Sea Pilot Not Sea Pilot

The stewards also ordered L. Salus' Sea Pilot scratched from today's seventh race. The horse arriving here today from Pimlico failed to correspond with the markings when taken to the receiving barn. Trainer Johnny Bejshak told officials the wrong horse had been vanned over.

Sammy Palumbo, called the "poor man's Arcaro," was the riding hero of the day, scoring with four winners. His successes included the featured Yorke purse.

Much to the disgust of those in a crowd of 7300, who made James W. Brown's Cy Dart the favorite, Palumbo rode J. K. Wynkoop's Dr. Johnson home by 2½ lengths. Second money went to Cy Dart, with R. Nlker's Knight's Hurry third in the field of five.

Dr. Johnson, a fair performer at Charles Town, paid $9 and was clocked in 1:27 1/5 for the seven furlongs over a fast track.

Both Ends of Daily Double

Palumbo made the daily double paying $13.40, a personal proposition. In the first race he kicked home C. E. Brining's 10-year-old Marandan. The veteran was a $4.60 favorite. He came back to win the second with Mrs. Mary Gheen's Brooke Argo, a $5.60 shot. In both cases he was opening a gap at the end.

Palumbo rode his fourth winner of the day and his sixth in two days aboard J. K. Wynkoop's Ron Light, a $6 favorite, in the eighth race.

The day's 2-year-old race was won by Albert Porto's Porto, jr., paying $16.40 and was well handled by Jockey Johnny Tammaro. Mrs. E. Du Pont Weir's Coral Water was second, with B. P. Bond's Gallic Gal, Palumbo ridden, in third position.

Nats Again Turn Back Tigers, 3-0

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats made it three in a row last night at Griffith Stadium, hanging a 3-0 beating on their favorite opponents, the Detroit Tigers, as Walter Masterson notched his eighth victory in 15 starts.

With the shutout Washington was credited with 22 consecutive innings of holding its foes scoreless. In their last three outings the Nats have given up only one run, and that unearned.

Before 16,000 fans, Newhouser and Masterson pitched no-hit ball for the first three innings.

Masterson was in mild trouble in the opening inning after issuing two walks, but escaped damage when Kell and Mullin grounded out.

Kell Gets 1st Hit

eGorge Kell made the first hit of the game when he singled to left with one out in the fourth and Masterson was in trouble again when Mullin singled to right, sending Kell to third with one out. He got out of the inning by fanning Wertz and watching Ferrell and Christman nail Kell on an attempted double steal.

Buddy Lewis struck the big blow of the ball game to that point when he lashed a triple into left field with one out in the sixth. He scored when McBride drove a line drive fly to Wertz in center field to move the Nats into a 1-0 lead.

Masterson scraped past another threatening inning in the seventh when Kell led off with the Tiger's fourth hit of the night, a single to left. Mullin sacrificed and Wertz was walked, but Masterson retired Mayo on a fly to Spence and got rid of Pinch Hitter Cramer on a grounder to Priddy.

Eddie Yost rapped Newhouser for a hit in the Nats' seventh that upped their lead to 2-0. It was a single to center with two out that scored Christman who walked and was sacrificed to second.

Mickey Vernon beat out a slow roller to Mayo to start the Nats' toward another run and a 3-0 lead in the eighth. He was forced by Spence, who took second on Priddy's infield out and was moved home by Christman's solid single to center.

Mize's 'Beaning' Hampers Eating

St. Louis, July 24 (AP).—Big Johnny Mize, New York Giant first baseman who was hit on the head by a pitched ball Tuesday night, was busy telling reporters that he had suffered no damage from the blow when the waiter brought him a club sandwich.

Mize opened his mouth wide, attempted to bite, and winced.

"Well, anyway, I'm O. K., except that the right muscles of my jaw are sore," he said sheepishly.

Jenkins' Note Cheers Skins: 'I'm Okay Now'

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

Relief for the aching fullback situation arrived in the Redskin mail yesterday morning.

It was a simple little note. It read:

"I'm okay now. Please send me a contract."

It was signed: "Jack Jenkins."

Behind that terse but extremely welcome note is a little story. Until it was received, there remained a dark suspicion that the good looking, pile-driving 205-pound former Vanderbilt All-American fullback would never play again.

Last year almost finished him as a player.

Fifth of Season

It was in the fifth game of the season against the Philadelphia Eagles. The Redskins were unbeaten at the time, having squeaked past the Boston Yanks, 14-6, and the Detroit Lions, 17-16.

The Pittsburgh Steelers were tied, 14-14, and only the Sunday before the Eagle game the Redskins apparently had "arrived" as a power in scoring a well-merited 24-14 victory. The Tribe seemed headed for another Eastern Division title.

Then disaster struck Jenkins—and the Redskins.

Early in the game he intercepted a Philadelphia pass and fled towards touchdownland. Around the 15-yard-line a desperate Eagle took a shot at Jenkins and sent the Redskin tumbling out of bounds. Jenkins didn't get up.

Has Rib, Chest Injuries

Rib and chest cartileges were badly torn. He left the game.

He never fully recovered from those injuries and was only of part-time value to the team the rest of the year. He missed four full games. The Redskins hit the down grade and eventually the Giants, whom the Redskins had whipped decisively the week before, rolled into the title.

Through the long winter the Redskins heard little from Jenkins. He was down in Nashville where he and his pretty wife operate a restaurant near Vanderbilt University—the alma mater of both. It didn't look as if he would make it.

The Redskins went after first rate fullbacks to fill the gap. They obtained Ralph Ruthstrom from the Los Angeles Rams as part of the deal for Steve Bagarus. They concentrated on fullbacks at the draft meetings and grabbed off Bill Gold of Tennessee, Joe Martin of Cornell, Bob Musick of USC, and Mark Osborne of Iowa State.

Sal Rosato, who, like Jenkins, was injured last year, will be back but his condition is questionable.

The newcomers are all green to the intricacies of the "T" formation.

So you see why it was such good news to hear from Jenkins: "I'm o k now."

Crossley Now Publinx Choice

Minneapolis, July 24 (AP).—The field in the National Public Links golf tournament cut itself to four semifinalists today with Wilfred Crossley of Atlanta, Ga., established as a favorite by his 2 and 1 victory over Edward Srvasti of Detroit, Mich., a hard man to down.

Don Dostert of St. Paul, Minn., was carried to the seventeenth green before he defeated Ralph Vranesic of Denver, Colo., 2 and 1, for another semifinal spot.

The field was completed with Avery Beck of Raleigh, N. C., downing Philip Gordon of Oakland, Calif., 5 and 4, and Benjamin Hughes of Portland, Oreg., dumping Alfred Littleton of Wichita, Kans., 5 and 3.

Detroit Drivers Out to 'Get' Him, Lombardo Says

New York, July 25 (U.P.).—Guy Lombardo, a suave Canadian who makes sweet music with a band or a motorboat, charged today that four Detroit drivers are out to "get" him when he defends the International Gold Cup in the fortieth regatta at Rockaway inlet on August 10.

Lombaro disclosed he had received threats as well as "tips" from friends that all would not be speed and sportsmanship when they start the 90-mile grind. Some of the warnings advised him to withdraw from the race and others urged him to protest to the referee and the American Power Boat Association.

"I won't do either," Lombardo said with an enigmatic smile tugging at his tight lips. "If they want to play that way, that's the way I'll play it. Let them try to stop me."

Reds' Gift Runs Give Dodgers Sixth Straight, 6-1

Bums Hike Lead to Six; Braves Lose

Cincinnati, July 24 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers took advantage of eight bases on balls and a muffed fly by a Cincinnati outfielder today to score several gift runs and defeated the Reds, 6-1, for their sixth consecutive triumph. It was their third in a row over the Reds in the current western trip.

The Dodgers increased their lead to six games over the Braves, who lost to the Cubs, 6-4.

Cubs Beat Braves, 6-4, on Triple Outburst

Chicago, July 24 (AP).—Three three-base hits and Doyle Lade's careful nine-hit pitching combined to give the Chicago Cubs a 6 to 4 victory over the Boston Braves today.

The win ended the series at two victories each.

50-Lap Title Race Scheduled Tonight At Lanham Oval

A 50-lap (12½ miles) Eastern States championship grind, sanctioned by the American Racing Drivers' Circuit, with 25 entered tops a seven-event midget automobile racing card at the West Lanham, Md., Speedway tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Headliners are two western Offenhauser aces who have won national recognition over long distances.

Duane Carter, Pacific Coast speedster, set two track records in his Lanham debut last weekend, and also won the 500-lap Los Angeles Coliseum classic earlier in the month. He swept three events over the finest field assembled here.

A newcomer to Lanham competition will be Al Bonnell, Chicago, who won the national 100-mile dirt track midget championship at Langhorne, Pa., last year.

Sports and Police Called Poor Mixers

Use of Washington policemen to keep order at sports functions was berated yesterday by Representative James C. Auchinloss (R., N. J.), who also struck at the local system of having a member of the police force on the boxing commission.

Insisting that Griffith Stadium hire its own peace officers, Representative Auchinloss said: "Suppose I gave a croquet tournament, couldn't I have some members of the police force there to keep order?"

Out Fishing...

By Jack Bell

AT A FISHING match arranged by the Bowlers' Victory Legion and financed by metropolitan bowling operators last Monday, 49 Walter Reed-Forest Glen hospitalized veterans of World War II and local bowling alley operators were present at Chesapeake Beach. Because of rain and chilly weather many vets were not permitted to leave the hospital.

About 3:30 p. m. the rain stopped and despite a rough sea the vets insisted on fishing. Four boats left harbor, three for the "Gooses" and one to fish off Holland Point. In all 253 fish were caught.

Lieut. John P. Duffy, Sergt. George R. Parker and Corp. Charles Glenn, each with a 2½-pound croaker, divided the special first and second prizes for vets. The results by boat are as follows:

"GALE D.," with 10 fishermen aboard, fishing off the Gooses, boated 20 croakers. Gerry Locte, aged 13, Bethesda, Md., caught the largest, and Tech. Sergt. John Agogino, Forest Glen, the most.

"Hilmansam," with 11 fishermen aboard, fished off Holland Point and boated 28 large white perch and 17 croakers.

"Smoky Joe," with 17 fishermen aboard, most of them vets From Walter Reed Hospital, boated 105 croakers while fishing off the Gooses. The fishermen were forced to quit when the fish were biting best because of no more bait.

Unranked Player Surprises Seixas

Sea Bright, N. J., July 24 (AP).—Three seeded stars and a 22-year-old unranked player, southpaw James Brink of Seattle, Wash., reached the semifinal round of the men's singles in the Fifty-ninth Annual Seat Bright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club Invitation Tourney today with sparkling straight-set victories.

Top-seeded Frank Parker, ousted Francisco (Pancho) Segura of Ecuador, and meets fourth-seeded William Talbert of Wilmington, Del., in the semifinal round tomorrow.

Talbert beat Bob Falkenburg of Beverly Hills, Calif., Gardner Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., Earl Cochell of Brooklyn.

Brink, a University of Washington prelaw student, scored the day's surprise when he dumped Victor Seixas of Philadelphia, 8—6, 6—4.

The Bucs won the first game, 8-6, on the strength of a 7-run first inning and took the nightcap, 3-2, by rallying for two runs in the eighth.

Bill Bennings

DEAR FOLKS: At Belair.

Seems like every time I look up in a race track press box I see Jockey Norman Brown making a comeback. That's what he is doing now and making a good job of it. Brown doesn't smile when he confesses he is 37 years old and rode on the flat 25 years ago. For years he knocked around the half-milers in Maryland and the fairs in Virginia and Pennsylvania with varied success. He finally turned to steeplechase riding and acquired a certain amount of fame from 1931 to 1934. After several retirements that last perhaps six months, he quit "for good" in 1935 and became a trainer. But the saddle lure, plus the need of ready cash, brought him back to silks in 1941 and he had fair success through 1944 before he again hung up his tack "for all-time." This spring the Glenn Riddle Stable was looking for a rider for Soldier Song and Brown was asked to pilot the horse at Belmont. Norman brought him home on top to a stake victory, the first he had ridden in his career. Since then he has won three other stakes, five races in nine tries. His victories include the $15,000 Meadow Brook Steeplechase with Kent Miller's War Battle at Belmont. Opening day he was aboard Topsy Rose and narrowly escaped injury when the horse broke down and fell. With typical steeplechase rider pluck, Norman was back in the saddle again working out a jumper this morning. Brown isn't the only old timer around. In the sixth race on the Friday program is A Do-A 15-year-old gelding and long a favorite at Charles Town and on the Maryland minor tracks. More power to him.

Yankee Valor, $100,000 Gold Cup Hopeful, Dies Suddenly

Colic Ends Career of Race Star

Inglewood, Calif., July 24 (AP).—Yankee Valor, winner of the $50,000 Hollywood Derby and a leading candidate for the $100,000 Gold Cup next Saturday, died suddenly today.

One of the Nation's leading 3-year-olds, the rangy, good-natured chestnut succumbed to an attack of colic despite all-night ministrations from two veterinarians. He was stricken only yesterday.

His owner, Col. L. G. Burns of Canoga Park, also was with him during the last hours in the stable at Hollywood Park.

The Yank had won $109,475 in less than two years of racing, marked by duel after duel with On Trust, another leading California-bred which finished second in this year's Preakness and fourth in the Kentucky Derby.

Their last meeting was July 12, when Yankee Valor ran away with the Hollywood Derby, whipping On Trust by three lengths in his first race at a mile and one quarter. Heretofore considered a sprinter, that performance put him among the favorites for the Gold Cup.

Two weeks earlier he dumped On Trust in the $25,000 Cinema Handicap, to even the score for two defeats at Santa Anita last winter. Yankee Valor's other two stakes wins were scored as a 2-year-old last summer at Del Mar.

His last work was Tuesday, and his handlers reported he checked in in good shape.

PUC Approves WRECO Plan Of Dissolution

The Public Utilities Commission approved yesterday the plan of the Washington Railway and Electric Co. for dissolution and of the Potomac Electric Power Co. for its recapitalization.

The decision of the commission said that inasmuch as WRECO was "a holding company, performing no utility service . . . . its liquidation is desirable. The commission is convinced that no feature of the (WRECO) plan . . . . adversely affects the operating utilities subject to its jurisdiction or the interests of consumers."

PEPCO thus will increase its authorized capital stock from $30 million to $75 million which will consist of 400,000 shares of $50 par value preferred stock and 5½ million of $10 par value common stock.

As part of the recapitalization the presently outstanding 90,000 shares of $100 par value common stock of PEPCO, all of which is owned by WRECO, will be reclassified into 85,000 shares of new preferred and 2,961,250 shares of new common stock.

PEPCO is to issue 140,000 shares of new preferred stock to the present holders of its 5½ and 6 per cent preferred stocks now outstanding.

New preferred shares not issued pursuant to the exchange offer will be sold at competitive bidding. The dividend rate on the new preferred has not been determined, the commission pointed out, because of the competitive sale, but it remarked that the 5½ and 6 per cent rates on the existing preferred stocks "are obviously far in excess of the current cost of preferred stock capital to a utility with a credit rating comparable to that enjoyed by PEPCO."

Subject to the receipt of a satisfactory bid, the commission concluded that the "proposed refinancing of the presently outstanding preferred stock of PEPCO is in the public interest."

WRECO is authorized to acquire the 85,000 shares of new preferred stock and 2,961,250 shares of new common of PEPCO. These new PEPCO stocks will be distributed to WRECO stockholders on the basis of one share of new preferred and 4¼ shares of new common of PEPCO for each share of 5 per cent WRECO preferred and 40 shares of new PEPCO common for each share of WRECO common.

Richmond, Va., July 24 (AP).—Governor Tuck said today that State police "will be instructed to remain at Virginia Beach for an indefinite period" to aid local officers there in enforcing laws, "particularly those with reference to gambling and slot machines."

The Governor, in reply to a letter from H. Warfield Leeke, mayor of Virginia Beach, said his position "in this matteer is unchanged in that the enforcement of law is primarily a function of the local governments and the State should intervene only when the local officers are unable or unwilling, or both, to enforce the law."

Leeke, in a letter which reached the Governor today, said he had learned "certain establishments" which closed some time ago after gambling fines were imposed on their operators had now reopened.

He continued by referring to the resignation of C. E. Hobeck as chief of police July 18 and appointment of R. E. Thompson as his successor by the town council, effective August 1. Leeke also said he would like to have a conference with Comonwealth's Attorney Paul W. Ackiss and Thompson "prior to July 30" to ascertain "just what he (Thompson) will do to enforce the laws of the Commonwealth."

Governor Tuck has taken the attitude that antigambling laws should be enforced like any other laws and he has instructed State police to do what they can to enforce the statutes. State police have worked with local authorities in several raids in the Virginia Beach area.

The Governor wrote to Leeke: "Upon my return to the Capitol this afternoon, I find a copy of your letter of July 22 to the Honorable Paul W. Ackiss, Commonwealth Attorney for Princess Anne County, with reference to the matter of law enforcement at Virginia Beach.

"My position in this matter is unchanged in that enforcement of law is primarily a function of the local governments, and the State should intervene only when the local officials are unable or unwilling, or both, to enforce the law.

"Our Virginia State police will be instructed to remain at Virginia Beach for an indefinite period to aid and assist the local officers in the enforcement of the laws, particularly those with reference to gambling and slot machines at Virginia Beach . . ."

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Judge to Eye Ocean City Gaming Spots

Ocean City, Md., July 24 (AP).—Chief Judge W. Laird Henry, jr., of Maryland's First Judicial Circuit, said today he intends to visit Ocean City for a personal inspection of gambling activities along the resort's boardwalk.

The jurist said he expects to visit the Atlantic Ocean playground about August 1 for a conference with Associate Judge Edmund H. Johnson, who lives in Ocean City.

"Worcester is Judge Johnson's home county," Judge Henry explained. "Naturally he is more familiar with conditions there than I am, and in anything I might do about gambling conditions I probably would be guided largely by him."

Bailey Also Expected

Judge Henry lives at Cambridge, which is across the peninsula on the west side of Maryland's Eastern Shore. The third member of the circuit bench, Judge Levin Claude Bailey of nearby Salisbury, also is expected to participate in the conference.

At his home today, Judge Johnson said he had just returned from a vacation in New England and was not familiar with stories reporting the prevalence of slot machines, bingo games, dice tables, bookie establishments and other gambling activities in the resort.

Court Now in Recess

The Circuit Court now is in summer recess and is not scheduled to convene again in Worcester County until October. The judges, however, have authority to call a special session of the grand jury at any time.

Mayor Daniel Trimper, jr., who walked out of an impromptu city council meeting Tuesday night in a controversy with the town's three city councilmen, reiterated today that it is up to State and county authorities to enforce laws agains gambling.

"The law against slot machines is a State law. Let the State enforce it," he said.

"It's up to the sheriff and the State's attorney to handle that. That's a State law."

Good Tobacco Brings High Price in South

Valdosta, Ga., July 24 (AP).—The 1947 flue-cured auctions on 18 Georgia and three Florida markets opened today and the United States Department of Agriculture said better quality offerings brought from $3 to $8 more per hundred pounds than opening day last season.

The largest price increases were for fair to good cutters and fair to choice lugs. Most low lugs and all lower leaf offerings dropped $1 to $5 a hundred.

Best thin nondescript dropped $8.75, but all except a few grades averaged from $1 to $10.50 a hundred over the Government support level.

When bids dropped below the Government support level, growers took Commodity Credit Corporation loans based on 90 per cent of parity.

It was estimated that approximately 20 per cent of the baskets were rejected on some markets and delivered to the flue-cured stabilization corporation at support prices.

The general quality of the offerings as a whole was better than opening day last year. Some markets reported tobacco of lower quality but the belt generally sold more good to choice lugs and more finest while considerably less leaf grades were marketed.

Lowest price of the day was $4 for individual lots of poorest mondescript, which carried no support price. The top price on some markets was around $60 for an occasional basket of better cutters. Last year, the opening extreme prices ranged from $45 to $52 dollars per hundred this year and sales were heavy in volume on all markets.

The estimated general average for morning sales this year on several markets ranged from $42 to $45.

Munitions Board Stockpiling Is Behind Schedule

By The Associated Press

The Army-Navy Munitions Board reported to Congress yesterday that stockpiling of strategic materials is behind schedule.

The board said in a statement filed with Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) that this is due principally to a lack of materials available at reasonable prices.

The five-year plan adopted by Congress in 1946, the board said, contemplated spending 360 million dollars per year. At the end of the 1947 fiscal year, which closed June 30, the board had spent 10 million dollars, and obligated 70 million dollars more for materials to be delivered during the 1948 fiscal year.

"It appears at this time, assuming the funds will be available, it will require about six years to accumulate the stocks," the board said.

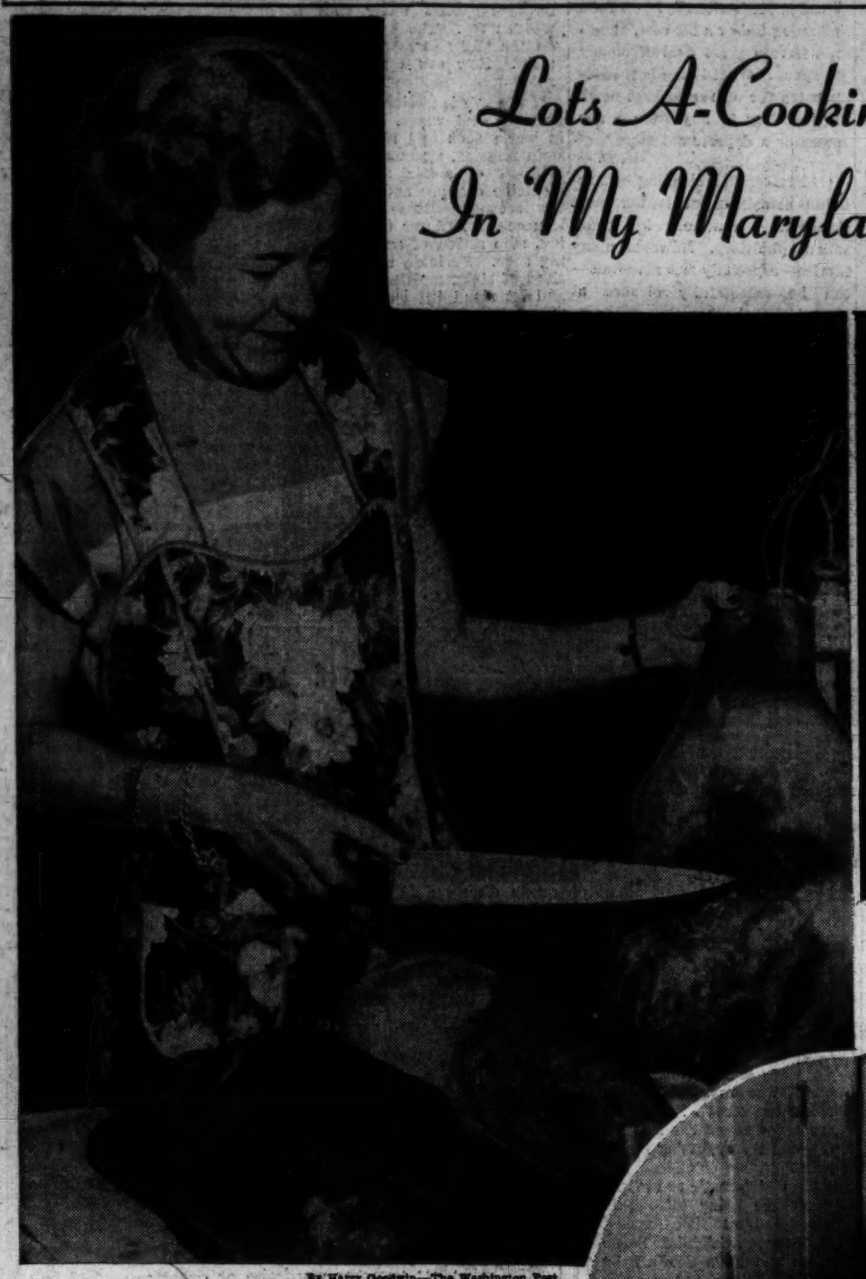
Lots A-Cookin' In 'My Maryland'



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

THOSE are genuine, hickory-smoked, country hams that Mrs. Ann Boyd, Olney, Md., is preparing for the supper to be given Tuesday night by the women's board of Montgomery County General Hospital. Mrs. Boyd is committee chairman for the supper, the first the board has given in four years

BETTY PATRICIA ENGLISH, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merton English, jr., Chevy Chase, passes a plate of Maryland beaten biscuits—fluffy and round—which will be a feature of the meal served on the lawn of Sherwood High School in Sandy Springs to raise money for the Montgomery County Hospital

MRS. J. M. BARNSLEY, Olney housewife and vice chairman for the supper, shows how cole slaw will be made in an old-fashioned crock with fresh, crisp cabbage—just before serving

Ready for 'Come-Back' Supper

Montgomery Housewives Preparing for Benefit

By Lucia Brown

THE SPICY AROMA of baking, sugar-cured hams will drift from many a kitchen in Montgomery County, Md., within the next few days. So will the sharp, vinegary fragrance of old-fashioned boiled dressing, and the rhythmic sound of mallets striking against mounds of beaten biscuit dough.

The reason for this mouth-watering state of affairs is that next Tuesday, the Women's Board of the Montgomery County General Hospital will give its first annual supper in four years.

More than 1500 guests are expected on the shady lawn of Sherwood High School at Sandy Spring to partake of the succulent Southern fare. Hours for the supper will be from 5 to 8 p. m.

Given by the board to raise money for the hospital, these suppers have been a Montgomery County institution for more than 25 years. Before the war, they attracted hundreds of Washingtonians, Marylanders and Virginians, as well as people from even farther away.

Suspended During War

BECAUSE of food shortages, the annual benefit entertainment was abandoned during the war. But this year's "come-back" supper is expected to be one of the biggest and best ever. Besides the meal, there will be pony rides, grab bags, bingo, dancing and sales of homemade cakes, candy, lemonade, potted plants and fancy work.

All the food for the supper will be cooked by women of the community, and it will be food for which Maryland is famous—smoked ham, fried chicken, chicken salad, beaten biscuits, rolls and coleslaw.

The hams are the kind that have been cured and smoked according to old Maryland recipes, then hung in the smokehouse for a year or more. Rubbed first with dry salt, brown sugar, a little molasses and salt peter, they are packed in this mixture for six weeks, then lightly rinsed and sprinkled with borax. After that they are smoked with hickory wood until they acquire the proper light mahogany shade, then are left hanging in the smokehouse.

Cooking Is Art

PROPER cooking is also important if you want to serve delicious old ham. Here are the rules, as given by a Montgomery Countian:

Soak old ham in water from 24 to 48 hours, according to the dryness and age of the ham. Then place in a large kettle, skin side down, and cover with hot water to which several cups of sweet cider or one cup of vinegar has been added. Drop in a handful of cloves and simmer the ham gently 21 minutes for each pound, never letting it strike a boil.

Cool ham in the liquid, then skin. Prepare for baking by rubbing surface with a mixture of one cupful brown sugar and one or two teaspoons dry mustard. Stud the fat with cloves. While the ham bakes, pour over it a cup of honey and a cup of fruit juice. Bake only long enough to brown the surface. Just before it is done, scatter bread crumbs over the surface and garnish with pineapple rings.

Biscuits Are Round

THE beaten biscuits that will be served next Tuesday evening are the Maryland kind that are round as balls. The following recipe makes six dozen biscuits.

8 ounces lard
1½ pints cold water
Salt to taste

Mix dough and wrap in a strong cloth. Beat hard with an ax or mallet for about 30 minutes, or put it through a food chopper. Pinch off dough and shape in small balls about an inch and a half through. Stick them with a fork and bake in a hot oven.

Last-Minute Slaw

COLESLAW will not be cut and mixed until just before serving. The cabbage heads will be cut in half and soaked in ice water about an hour before the slaw is made. Then the cabbage will be shredded fine and mixed with dressing made by the following recipe:

6 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons flour
2 eggs
1 teaspoon dry mustard
Black pepper to taste

Mix thoroughly in top of double boiler and stir in one cup of vinegar. Cook until thick, cool and thin with sour cream.

This makes enough dressing for one 2 to 2½ pound head of cabbage.

MRS. ROGER J. WHITEFORD, Chevy Chase, stirs her specialty—pungent, flavorful boiled dressing for the cole slaw. Two hundred and forty pints of this dressing will be provided by contributors to the supper

Baigs Give Farewell For Attache

ONE OF Washington's best liked hostesses, Mrs. M. O. A. Baig and Mr. Baig, entertained yesterday afternoon at a cocktail party for the retiring Military Attache of the Indian Embassy, Col. Nawabzada Mohammad Sher Ali Khan. The guest of honor and a few of his friends remained for supper.

There were Indian dishes at supper, and oriental hors d'oeuvres with the cocktails. Kabab, kebbeh, halawa and baklava, served hot, were made of nuts, spice and vine leaves and rice.

The hostess wore black chiffon edged in flame red and gold. Her jewels were diamonds and rubies, and she wore a red bow in her hair. As the wife of the First Secretary of the Indian Embassy, Mrs. Baig acts as official hostess at the Embassy. Her party yesterday, however, was given at her apartment at Hotel 2400.

An interesting group gathered, including Military Attaches from Egypt, Iran, France, New Zealand and South Africa. From the British Embassy came the Military Attache, Col. G. E. Prior Palmer, and his assistant, Lieut. Col. Peter G. Molloy. Charles Adaire, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Thurston and Mr. and Mrs. Lampton Berry attended from the State Department.

Cafritzes in Maine

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz left Wednesday afternoon for Rockland, Me., where they will remain for about a month.

Vinsons Are Feted In Newport

CHIEF JUSTICE AND MRS. FRED VINSON, who are guests of Mrs. George Mesta at Newport are being feted at a continuous round of parties.

Tomorrow night they will be guests of honor at a dinner to be given by Mrs. Hamilton McK. Twombley at Vinland, her summer home. Mrs. Mesta entertained at luncheon for them on Wednesday and that afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Theodore P. Grosvenor were hosts at a reception at Wyndham. On Tuesday the Chief Justice and Mrs. Vinson were honor guests at a luncheon at Eastbourne Lodge, home of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Whitehouse. Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Warren also gave a cocktail party for them this week.

Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould will have as her weekend guest at Newport, Fernando Sabola de Medeiros, first secretary of the Brazilian Embassy. Coming from Boston to be with Mrs. Gould for the weekend is Mrs. Edward Logan, who has visited her in Washington. Mrs. Gould will entertain at dinner tomorrow evening for the visitors and will take them to the dance at Bailey's Beach.

In Washington, the Foreign Minister of Greece, Constantine, Tsaldaris, was entertained at dinner Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. John A. Kopsidas at their home on Chesapeake st.

Senator J. Howard McGrath was in the company and among others were Nicholas Lely, former Counselor of the Greek Embassy in Washington, who has been appointed Greek Minister to Holland; Dr. and Mrs. Thornton Hendrick and the Rev. Thomas Daniels.

Jabbars in New York

Sheikh Ahmed Abdula Jabbar, First Secretary of the Saudi Arabian Legation, and Mme. Jabbar are in New York for a short visit and are stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Proof of the Pudding

Hostesses Face Just Desserts In Cone Crisis

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

IDEAL solution for anyone who wants to earn a good living, yet stay cool, is to drive an ice cream truck! The city's striking ice cream drivers are asking for a raise from $60 to $97 a week, a tidy sum no matter how you look at it! If the union wins, cones might cost a quarter and budget-conscious hostesses, dependent on ice cream desserts, might have to switch to puddings or cut up fruit.

The Balkan Brotherhood

IN prospect, next winter appears drear, for one by one the Capital's nicest "extra" men are disappearing. Next to leave is "Rudi" Schoenfeld, who will hold down the interesting, uncomfortable job of Minister to Romania. Rudi is a brother of Arthur Schoenfeld, who has served as chief of mission for 16 years and who returned from Hungary a few weeks ago.

Ellis Briggs, our newly appointed Ambassador to Uruguay, did much spadework for the mid-August Inter-American Conference in Rio de Janeiro and planned to take it in before proceeding to his new post. Two days ago he was ordered to bypass Rio, go directly to Montevideo. The change in plan was a surprise, since Mr. Briggs is not only one most charming but is one of our most capable Latin American experts.

Those in the so-called "know" say that Ambassador William Pawley is the ointment's fly. Energetic Bill Pawley, whose first dip into diplomacy was an ambassadorship to Peru, has made the conference his "baby," wants no one to dim his personal luster, and is working hard to keep the diplomatic big shots down in his tropical bailiwick as long as possible. Recently Ambassador Pawley, accompanied by Brazilian Ambassador Martins and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, flew to Rio in President Truman's plane.

Even the Lobby's Full Up

FOR the ordinary individual, house-hunting in Washington is one of the grimmest, most cutthroat diversions. Those with "pull" get the best houses, and get them without lifting a finger. So it's real news, not real estate news, when a real estate nabob can't find a house.

For the past few weeks Frank Cortwright has been tramping Georgetown's streets, peering into house after house. Mr. Cortwright, in case you don't know, is no lesser light than president of the Association of Home Builders—and is rated one of the most successful real estate lobbyists in the Capitol.

All sorts of interesting stories are being brought back from Germany these days about American women. Evidently Army wives and children were sent too soon, couldn't get on and are being shipped back. There is something about the bombed out cities, the lack of social life, which "got" them. Right now there are no less than 60 women, all nervous cases, running up bills on Uncle Sam in the Stuttgart hospital.

No Servant Problem

ON THE brighter, side the smart ones are saving big money. They're billeted; the Commissary and Post Exchange sell food cheaper than they can buy it at home, and many, who never had domestic help, now indulge in several maids. A sergeant, who chauffeured a visiting notable, admitted that he and his wife had never "had it so good." She had a job and between them they were saving $300 a month.

When the first batch of wives arrived they were called "DPs," a feeble joke on Displaced Persons. But now they've been dubbed with a new set of initials: "FRs"—Fraulein Replacements.

Rings on Their Fingers

Bailey—Criswell

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Prince Bailey of Griffin, Ga., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Nell Verstille, to Howard Donald Criswell, jr. of Washington, son of Col. and Mrs. H. D. Criswell. The wedding will take place September 6 in Griffin.

MISS NELL BAILEY
. . . Washingtonian's fiancee

Miss Bailey is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Jefferson Barrow of Philadelphia and Griffin, and of Mrs. E. F. Bailey of Dublin and East Point, Ga. The bride-to-be attended Duke University where she was a member of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority.

Mr. Criswell is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Criswell of Washington and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Dorsey Carr, also of Washington. He was in the Army Air Forces in Europe for two years and is now completing his education at Duke.

Hasslinger—Bamman

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Ruth Hasslinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hasslinger of Miami, Fla., and Harvey W. Bamman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Bamman of Miami Beach, Fla., formerly of Washington.

The bride-elect attended the University of Miami. Mr. Bamman was graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School in Washington and is now completing his studies at the University of Miami. He served in the Navy for three years during the war.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 17, Expensively Reared, Left School At 16 in Favor of a Job, and Now Wants to Wed Handsome Untrained Co-Worker Who is 37

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My widowed mother has brought up my kid sister in the best possible manner—private schools, beautiful clothes and everything her heart desired always. They live in a lovely apartment in a nice neighborhood.

Sister decided to drop out of school a year ago—she was then 16—and persuaded mother to let her go to work; not that she needed the income.

At her place of employment she has met a man about 20 years her senior, a nice person, good looking, well dressed, etc., who has no professional training, however, and isn't rich. He and my sister want to be married immediately and go very far away to live.

Mother is naturally much concerned, as she wants what is best for Sis, who is now only 17; but I want your advice before I say anything further. I have suggested their getting engaged and waiting two years at least, but Sis won't listen to me. What is your opinion?

She's a Refugee From Discipline

DEAR E. L.: Having been pampered, petted and foolishly indulged by your mother to her 16th year, little Sis set forth with a puffed-up sense of her own consequence, to try to conquer the business world, I suppose—after finding herself exceedingly bored and weary, in a jaded way, with the effort of trying to "get by" in school, where she probably didn't do very well.

At her place of employment, she doubtless found life pretty dull, too,—not much glamour or heady excitement in the job, and maybe not much kow-towing to her as an expensively accoutred personality, either, after her "public," her employers and her co-workers had taken the measure of her abilities.

Here again, I daresay, she began to feel bored and weary, also vaguely fussed, forlorn and uncertain; and one surmises that in her bosom there developed, perhaps unconsciously, a desperate longing to "save face" by establishing a second lien on paternal-type sanctuary and adulation, something comparable to that which Mama had conditioned her to expect,—but preferably from a romantic-protector source.

She Is Looking For Easy 'Out'

AND HERE is a man, 20 years her senior, good looking, well dressed, a willing courtier if nothing else, whose marriage offer strikes her as being maybe the "out" she is looking for. An "out" from what? Well, an out from character discipline, whether self-administered or applied by impersonal authority—at school or in the workaday world. An out from the steady grind of becoming a real person, a solid individual—informed, reliable, competent, socially useful over life's long haul.

Seventeen marrying a man 37, of futile character untrained for anything, certainly smacks of folly to me. In her eagerness to make life easy on herself, Sis is going off the tracks at supersonic speed, in my opinion. And I daresay her beau has no better ballast and no more sense of direction than she. At his age, he probably has a pretty checkered romantic or marital history already—or he wouldn't be available.

In general, the best men his age are anchored and off the market; or if, for good reasons, they aren't, their sense of proportion usually restrains them from seeking marriage with an addled adolescent.

For advice: Heaven knows you're right in urging a long engagement for head-cooling purposes. Possibly these disinterested remarks will persuade Sis to listen to you. If so, urge her in the name of common sense to give up her job, also the idea of marriage until she's 21, and go back to school,—so that whatever happens in future years, she will have some self-help equipment to draw on in emergency. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Post.

Rayon Is Treated For Waterproofing

A new method of impregnating rayon has resulted in waterproofing raincoats.

The rayon fabric used to line the rainbreaker is an entirely new material which does not become sticky when wet, or harden and crack in spots when dried out. The outer material is a rayon cravenette.

Christmas in July

Wolkonsky

HERE'S something for the woman who likes to do her shopping early. Stocks of new winter furs are making their appearance in local stores, tantalizing reminders of snowy months ahead. By mid-August the big rush for winter outfits will be on as women, in the perverse manner of their sex, try on fur coats while still wearing summer cottons. One of the styles you'll see when searching for furs is the versatile cape-jacket, modeled above. It is fashioned of luxurious ranch mink. Note its nipped-in waistline, an important feature of the fall silhouette. There is a decided fullness in the sleeves and at the back in keeping with other new style trends. The jacket is available at an F st. department store

Shirts Shade Silhouette

Men's New Rainbow Raiment May Yet Steal Fashion Show

By Aline Mosby

HOLLYWOOD, July 24 (U.P.).—The canary yellow pants, maroon shirts and passionate pink cardigan jackets that long have draped and marked Hollywood men are surreptitiously infiltrating the rest of the Nation.

Baby blue sport jackets used to grace the elbows of only actors leaning on Beverly Hills bars and song-pluggers leaning on Hollywood lampposts. Agents alone wore horn-rimmed glasses, and a guy in green bedroom slippers and a plaid beret was sure to be a director.

Then a fellow ventured into downtown Los Angeles the other day with a Cobra skin tie flapping in the breeze.

Shoes Horning In

TWO men, an unimpeachable source informs us, slunk into Cleveland last week on green suede shoes with gold laces.

And a haberdashery in New York is selling California straw hats in eight delicious shades. Under the counter, of course. The clothesmakers, confronted with this evidence, confessed they've taken to exporting Hollywood garb.

Ties for out-of-towners are being daubed with brown horses on blue ties and red birds on yellow ties.

Wedgie shoes these many years have been spotted under trouser cuffs at Hollywood and Vine. But before long, say the shoe men, their snappy models will plod along Fifth ave. on somebody else besides zany hat designer Walter Florell.

One maker of loud sport shirts has gone so far as to build factories in New Zealand, Australia and South Africa.

"People are relaxing all over the world," happily reports William Freedman. "They found out the casual way we dress isn't so crazy after all."

Most Hollywoodites wouldn't be seen near-dead in a hat, but for out-of-towners the hat men are making felts preblocked in "the California shape." That's so Eastern buyers won't cheat and poke their bonnet into "the Eastern shape."

There is, it seems, a difference. It's in the dent.

Collarless, Not Colorless

"WE SHOWED a collarless, cardigan tuxedo at a men's fashion show in Palm Springs," confessed manufacturer Harry Roth. "It caused a furor. The suit sold in Beverly Hills like beer on a warm day. Come next year Mr. R may gather courage to send the thing to Chicago, St. Louis and New York.

Hollywood men with foresight also are snapping up the new "cardishirt." Outside the pants, it's a jacket. Inside, a shirt.

Another shirt man threw caution to the breeze and manufactured a "folo-thru" number. Shirt and sleeves cut in one piece. Comes in fiesta pink or antique brown, too.

The mere male may soon have a chance to flaunt his own fantastic fashions and let the girl in the pea-pod silhouette on his arm, do a bit of holding on for herself.

"C'mon, pop . . . smile pretty!"

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

(1) I have a brocaded satin chair that is badly soiled. Is there a cleaner that I can use on it myself or should I have it cleaned professionally? (2) I am planning to buy a fur coat, but do not have a great deal of money to spend. What is the best inexpensive fur on the market now? Is it better to buy from a fur store or a department store?

H. D.

(1) Professional cleaning by a reliable establishment is the most satisfactory treatment for badly soiled upholstery. However, many fabrics—especially flat materials—can be successfully cleaned at home if you are thorough and careful. The difficulty is getting the fabric cleaned evenly. It might be well to use a cleaning powder first (the kind that's used in cleaning rugs.) This takes out grease and ground-in soil. Then upholstery soap or one of the commercial soapless lather preparations can be used to take out water-soluble stains. Be sure, first, that water will not streak or change the colors in the material. Make a test on an inconspicuous part of the chair. These cleaning preparations can be purchased in department, drug, and 10-cent stores. Follow the directions on the package.

2. Mouton lamb is one of the least expensive furs on the market now and has been exceedingly popular for the past few years. It is sheered lambskin and wears well. Properly treated skins are quite soft and look a good deal like beaver. Persian paw and muskrat are also among the less expensive furs, but considerably more than mouton. I believe you will find the fur specialty shops and the fur sections of department stores equally helpful and reliable.

In packing, I wrapped a piece of light blue pure silk around a bottle of toilet water with a wooden top. The bottle leaked on the silk and made a brown stain. How can I remove the spot?

M. C.

If the silk is washable, soak the stain in cool water. Then wash in warm suds and rinse. If the stain remains, apply a 10 per cent solution of acetic acid with a medicine dropper and let stand a few seconds. Rinse and repeat if necessary. After the last rinsing, stop action of acid with baking soda. Sprinkle soda on both sides of stain, moisten with water and let stand till bubbling stops. Then rinse well and dry.

If acetic acid isn't effective, you may be able to remove the stain with a mixture of 1 teaspoon sodium perborate and one pint hydrogen peroxide. Sponge with this solution, then rinse with water.

Both acetic acid and the peroxide solution may affect the color of the silk, so try them first on a corner of the material.

Purple iris, used as a centerpiece on my dining table, dripped badly and stained the white cotton cloth. Laundering did not remove these stains. What can I use to take them out?

R. R. D.

Iris sometimes leaves a stain very much like purple ink that cannot be removed with soap and water. Soak your cloth for 15 minutes in a solution made of 1 tablespoon of household bleach to 1 quart of water. Rinse three times in clear water after soaking.

Can you give me a recipe for chicken cacciatori, an Italian dish referred to in the movie "Sailor Takes a Wife?"

E. F.

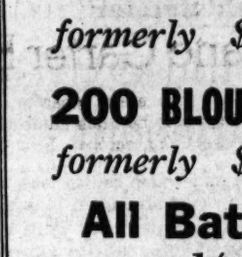
Here is a recipe for making enough chicken cacciatori (or casserole) to serve six persons:

2 frying chickens, 2 pounds each
¼ cup olive oil
2 medium-sized onions, minced
1 clove garlic, minced
1 red pepper, minced
2½ cups canned Italian tomatoes
1 small can tomato paste
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon black pepper

Disjoint and cut chicken in pieces for frying. Saute in olive oil 15 to 20 minutes, or until golden brown, adding onions, garlic and pepper the last few minutes to brown lightly. Mix together the remaining ingredients and add to chicken mixture. Cover and simmer about ½ hour, or until chicken is very tender. Add additional seasoning if desired. Serve chicken on hot platter with sauce over top, or serve chicken separately with sauce over rice or spaghetti.

PETUNIA!

Sorry, folks,
I cannot cope
With woodwork when
I'm out of soap



There's a way, Petunia! You can remove those fingerprints and general all-over soil, with a tablespoonful of soda dissolved in a pail of hot water.

Market Memo

By Lucia Brown

FRESH fish from the Atlantic are scarcer here this weekend. The reasons: Storms along the coast . . . and increased demand for fish because of the buyers' strike on meat.

Two interesting seafood items are being introduced on the local fish market, however . . . California Stone crabs and Nova Scotia baby lobsters. The Stone crabs . . . air-freighted from California . . . are five or six times the size of Eastern crabs. The price per pound is lower, too . . . though all crabs are a good buy now.

The baby lobsters are smaller than those caught off the U. S. coast. In fact, it's illegal to catch these little lobsters . . . weighing 6 to 12 ounces . . . in our waters. The Canadians allow it, and are shipping in these tender, delicate lobsters at reasonable prices.

Beef, pork, veal, and lamb prices are still rising . . . supplies of the less expensive cuts are scarce. Wise shoppers will take advantage of current moderate prices on meats, such as smoked beef tongue and frying chickens.

Prices on beans . . . both lima and snap . . . are lower this weekend. Irish potatoes also are declining in price, but cabbage and onions are up a bit. Supplies of yellow sweet corn are increasing.

Peaches, cantaloupes, watermelon, early apples, and blueberries are abundant and excellent in quality. Grapes and plums still arriving in good quality from California . . . especially choice red Duarte plums and Thompson's Seedless white grapes.

She'll Soon Be Flying To Rio

By Ruth Brigham

Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg is preparing to attend her fifth international conference as "buffer, subsecretary and valet" to her husband, President of the Senate and chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

This time it'll be flying down to Rio, perhaps in President Truman's plane, for the cosmopolite who has diaried United Nations conferences in San Francisco, Paris, London and New York.

When Senator Vandenberg said he "wouldn't go without her" she didn't hesitate. Chances are she wouldn't have hesitated anyway, because:

"Pops needs me to look after him. He won't stop working long enough to eat unless I make him. Too, I have my typewriter along and use it. I always get to know the reporters and help them all I can."

The lady from Michigan who is a potential candidate for the First Lady's job—"but only if Pops is drafted, and that doesn't happen often"—said of the past conferences:

"I got the most out of the one in Paris, enjoyed San Francisco best, worked hardest in London.

During her 17 years in Washington attractive Mrs. Vandenberg has learned to take many things in her stride, namely:

"You have to have skin like a turtle, and not mind what people say about your husband. That's the best advice for new official wives. And you can't let differences in opinions of husbands come between friendship of wives.

"I choose my friends, regardless of their parties. I don't try to 'get votes' for my husband. I think his record should do that. Of course there are many social demands, because of his position."

The ringing telephone at their Wardman Park apartment testified to that, but Mrs. Vandenberg said:

"I accept what we can, and what I think we should, and when I am so tired it begins to get me down, I just go to Atlantic City and hide out for a week."

Of the 1948 presidential elections, however, she said:

"Neither my husband nor I want it. We have nearly five more years to go, anyhow, in the Senate, and I'd like us to have some fun after that.

"I believe his past four years, in particular, have demonstrated that he puts his country before his party."

To the statement that "his age has been said to be against him:

"He was only 62 last March."

Mrs. Everett Is Jill of All Trades

By Genevieve Reynolds

Taxi driver, parlor maid, chauffeur, clerk, and just to be rural, an "Egg and I" farmerette role—these were few of the stunt-a-day stories which Mrs. Frieda Wyandt Everett did for New York newspapers. That's why she is one of this year's national headline winners of Theta Sigma Phi, women journalists' honorary fraternity.

Mrs. Everett, who is chief of the documentary articles section in the State Department's Office of Information and Cultural Affairs, was selected along with Miss Laura Lou Brockman and Miss Sylvia Stone from some 10,000 members of the society.

Mrs. Everett's versatility, in the judgment of the Theta Sigma Phi committee, put her among the front runners. Not content with filling the columns with local news, she journeyed to England, where she was a waitress for an English Lord, a cotton mill worker and a mine investigator in South Wales.

Had Varied Career

Her "Poor Working Girl Abroad" series sent her on to free lance writing in Paris. There she wrote for the London Express, Glasglow Herald and the London Evening Standard.

MRS. FRIEDA EVERETT
. . Headline award winner

On the New York Evening Graphic, 1923-'29, she wrote the "Betsy Patterson" society column, covered music, reviewed books, edited fiction and wrote features for daily and weekend editions, besides editing the woman's page. Later she became staff feature writer for the New York Daily Investment News.

From 1930-'37, Mrs. Everett was part owner of a chain of Westchester County (N. Y.) newspapers.

Of all her diversified career experience, including running a chicken farm at Brewster, N. Y., she says "trying to interpret the United States to foreign peoples around the world is the most interesting and self-satisfying."

Directs Writers

Brown-haired, slender Mrs. Everett now directs a staff of nine writers who supply feature material for all United States Information Service posts abroad. This means a continuous flow of Americana background material which must be used in London, Siam, India, Italy, Peru and China. Three weekly pieces, "the Economic Review," the "Letters from America" and the "Far East Review" are sent by wireless to all outposts. Eight other weekly airmail roundups follow developments in fields of social progress, art, labor and commerce.

Hard-working, alert Frieda plunged into the international arena when business brought her husband, Robert Everett, executive vice president of the Dairy Industries Supply Association, to Washington in 1942. In December of that year, she became assistant chief of publications in the Office of Inter-American Affairs, subsequently rising to chief of publications. When certain press functions were terminated in 1946, she was in charge of its books, pamphlets and poster programs. Until she was employed by the State Department last February, she had originated, planned or edited millions of pamphlets depicting heroes of history to our Latin American neighbors.

Aside from her State Department duties, Mrs. Everett manages a three generation family, and works in her Cleveland Park garden. On weekends she packs off her family to a recently acquired former slave cabin near Warrenton.

Mrs. T. S. Wilkinson Has New Grandchildren

Mrs. Theodore Stark Wilkinson of Washington has two new grandchildren. Her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Hunter, are the parents of a baby girl born July 11 at Hanover, N. H. Mrs. Hunter is the former Miss Anne Wilkinson. Mrs. George T. Hall of Grosse Pointe, Mich., the former Miss Joan Wilkinson, has a son, born July 21. Mrs. Wilkinson is now visiting in Grosse Pointe.

Mrs. Elsie Peteson New Commander of Navy Mothers' Clubs

Mrs. Elsie Peteson of Philadelphia was elected commander of the Navy Mothers' Clubs of America at a recent convention held in Cincinnati. The organization claims a membership of more than 30,000.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Eleanor Comer, Rochester, N. Y., first vice commander; Mrs. Clytie Berley, Oakland, Calif., second vice commander; Mrs. Madge Constance, Seattle, Wash., adjutant; Mrs. F. J. Jursits, Kansas City, Mo., finance officer; Mrs. Emma Jones, McAllen, Tex., judge advocate; Mrs. Betty Schott, Dallas, Tex., chaplain; Mrs. Martha McAllister, Wheeling, W. Va.; Mrs. Irene Geyer, Memphis, Tenn., matron-at-arms; Mrs. Alda Wilson, Charlotte, N. C., and Mrs. Caroline Campbell, Minneapolis, Minn., color bearers.

Miss Rumshin Becomes Bride

Miss Annette Sylvia Rumshin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Rumshin of Alexandria, Va., and Harold Bernard Fagelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Fagelson, also of Alexandria, were married on July 4.

Rabbi Samuel Berkowitz performed the ceremony in George Mason Hotel and a reception followed.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white suit with matching accessories and carried an orchid and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Phyllis Kleinman and Seymour Fain attended the couple. The newlyweds will reside in Alexandria following a wedding trip to Atlantic City.

Miss Richards to Wed

The marriage of Miss Carolyn Louise Richards, daughter of Mrs. Louise F. Richards, and John Morrill Gwynn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Gwynn, Gloucester, Va., will take place Sunday at 4 p. m. in St. David's Chapel, Macomb and Klingle sts. nw.

Madden Says Hartley Proves Truman Right

Chairman Fred Hartley of the House Labor Committee was speechless the other morning when Representative Ray Madden, slow-talking Indiana Democrat, interrupted a closed-door meeting of the Labor Committee to come to the support of his chairman.

Hartley

Hartley, who doesn't like Madden, had been discussing the CIO's open support for a victorious Democratic Congressman in Baltimore.

"I want to say something in defense of our chairman," Madden suddenly interrupted. There was immediate silence, since committee members know how Madden and Hartley feel toward each other.

"Every time he makes a statement about the Taft-Hartley Labor bill his cosponsor, Senator Taft, takes issue with him," continued Madden. "When our chairman decided the coal operators were violating the law by their agreement with Mr. Lewis, Senator Taft as much as said our chairman didn't know what he was talking about.

"Now here's this corrupt-practices section—Senator Taft is ready to repeal it, but our chairman still supports it.

"I for one am tired of Senator Taft kicking our chairman around. I'm sure our chairman knows as much about that law as Senator Taft does."

Hartley by this time was grinning broadly—but he didn't care so much for the rest of Madden's remarks.

"It seems to me that the two sponsors of this bill have already proven by their actions that President Truman was correct in his veto message when he said the bill was saturated with confusion and completely unworkable. Of course, when I heard the veto message read, I hardly thought the two sponsors of the bill themselves would hasten to prove the President correct."

Marshall on Russia

Secretary of State Marshall expressed some significant ideas on the foolishness of war with Russia when he met with 10 Democratic Congressmen last week. He seemed to be in complete agreement with Representative Toby Morris of Oklahoma, who argued that the Communist ideology would not be wiped out by military action.

"History shows us that Christianity and Mohammedism fought for 500 years, and nothing was gained for either side," said the Oklahoma Congressman. "That's about what would happen if war broke out now."

The Secretary of State agreed that "fighting communism is pretty much like fighting shadows." Our troubles with the Russians, he went on to say, are not just a matter of rivalry between our form of government and theirs.

Much more important than politics as a difference between us, explained Secretary Marshall, is their intense nationalism, and of course the critical economic situation in Europe and the Near East. Marshall started to tell about negotiations with Moscow now in progress, but Representative Chet Holifield stopped him.

"Mr. Secretary, if these negotiations are secret," the California Congressman cautioned, "I think it would be better that you not tell us about them so we can't be held responsible in case they leak to the press."

Marshall smiled and agreed. Returning to his discussion of Russia, he said it was a mistake to think of the Soviet Union as a "police state completely dominated and held together by fear of the secret police." People can be ruled by force for a time, but such a state cannot hold together without a real morale and enthusiasm. It takes more than mere authority.

"In the Army we know that a bad commander can't enforce his authority for long," continued the Secretary of State. "His men have got to learn to trust him and rely upon him. It is obvious that the Russian people believe in their leaders.

"A lot of the things we read these days as statements by Russian leaders at international conferences are purely for home consumption, as for instance, the charge by Mr. Molotov that the United States had taken millions of dollars' worth of German patents. As a matter of fact, I talked to Stalin about that when I was in Moscow later. I told him it was pure propaganda, and he didn't deny it.

"Molotov knew it wasn't true when he said it—and he knew I knew it wasn't true."

Why Men Hate

Warming to his subject, Marshall talked at length about propaganda. He said that during the war our troops in the Pacific were out to kill. The atrocities of the Bataan death march did that to them. They were out to get a Jap.

"But in the European theater our troops never really hated the German soldier—until the end. They even admired his courage and skill. In the Battle of the Bulge, however, a small detachment of about 30 men was captured and machine-gunned in cold blood. One of the boys lived and was able to tell what happened.

"That story swept the American lines like wildfire. And from that point on every American soldier fought with doubled fury. He felt toward the Germans the same way our troops in the Pacific felt toward the Japs.

ALL DRESSED UP FOR FALL will be the Sheraton Hotel's Dubonnet Room and cocktail lounge. Interior decorators of the Sheraton chain have been going over plans with Robert Patterson, the hotel's new manager. The work will be arranged so that there will be no interruption to business. Dancing, dining and cocktailing will go on as usual—except that you'll notice the spots are getting prettier all the time.

Herbie Zampini
At Quonset Inn

A large downtown restaurant is due to blossom forth this fall as a major night club—floor shows, dancing 'n all . . . Willie Biron, partner in Club 1203, is considering taking over another large nitery project. September will tell the full story—and it promises to be hectic.

ROMAN CONCERT SPONSORS. Among the sponsors of the Roman Singers of the Vatican Choir who'll appear at Griffith Stadium on August 3, are Maj. and Mrs. Earl Clarke of Washington. Mrs. Clarke is also that beautiful career girl, Olivia Davis, owner of Merry-Land . . . Bob Callahan, ace radio pianist, and singer Vicki Moore have joined the Merry-Land diversion set-up.

VACATIONEERING. Off to Canada via Atlantic City and New Hampshire is Alfred Merrick, manager of the Roger Smith Hotel and its Starlight Roof . . . Marjory Hendricks, owner of Normandy Farm and the Water Gate Inn, started for Madison, Wis., in a strictly jive car—a coupe with cowboy mud guards and fox tails floating from the hood. She's taking this jazzy jalloppy to her son Roger at the University of Wisconsin . . . Parker, the Madrillon's dynamic head waiter, is off to Mexico. He'll almost certainly enliven the night life picture in Mexico City.

Looking for a new love interest is Louis Lee, the Casino Royal's perky femcee-singer. She's fresh divorced from "Chuck" Bode, handsome Chicago bass-player. "When I sing 'The Man I Love,' that's the way I feel," says Miss Lee. "But no more musicians, well, anyway, no more bass players. That's positive."

The PEOPLE'S FAVORITE. "Across the Alley From the Alamo" is hitting all over town. It sounds especially swell when the China Clipper's Stan Jones takes it for a ride on his accordion . . . "As You Desire" heads the request list at the Neptune Room according to Sammy Ferro, leader of the Tidesmen. Sammy opines that the "Bleep, Bloop" thing written about a dripping faucet, will top "Open the Door, Richard"—and die as quickly (Speed the day!) . . . "Oh, My Achin' Heart," written by Little Jack Little, is naturally the top request at El Patio. (But Little Jack's nerves are getting edgy account of the zanies who ask him to play "Oh, My Achin' Back.")

THE BUILDERS. A two-house man is Leon Bocek, maitre d'hotel of the Hamilton. With one house already on his acre out at Silver Spring, now he's starting to build another. He hasn't made up his mind whether to sell the house or move into it . . . Oscar Davis, former band leader at the Old New Orleans and now a business associate of its owner, Nick Gaston, is building an addition to his Takoma Park home in his spare hours. Says he, "After I built a rock garden, I decided I'd developed enough muscle to build anything."

A violinist's most agonizing moment came to Michel, owner of Michel's, when he snapped a fiddle string in the midst of a broadcast. Now he keeps an extra violin on hand for a similar emergency. It'll probably never happen again.

Mike Lends a "Helping Hand," Gets Car Approved

We'll have to omit Mike's last name, because it would never do to let the traffic authorities identify him.

Mike had to take his car through the inspection lane, and realized it wouldn't pass because the bulb in his stoplight was burned out. But being Irish, he decided to give it a try anyhow.

Sure enough, the attendant at the lane soon came to the matter of the stoplight.

"Work the brake pedal, please," he requested as he stepped around to the rear of the car. Mike worked the pedal apprehensively.

"It doesn't light up," came the voice from the rear.

"Doesn't light up?" echoed Mike. "It must light up. I just had the car thoroughly checked yesterday."

"Maybe so, but it doesn't work."

Mike emerged from the car. "Here," he said, "you get in and work the pedal, and let me look."

The attendant got in and worked the pedal.

"By gosh it doesn't work," called Mike. "Push it a little harder." The attendant pushed a little harder.

"Ah, that did it," called out the thespian convincingly. "Guess it must have been stuck. It's working fine now."

So the attendant took his word for it, and issued a sticker for the car.

NO WRINGER?

Paul V. Thompson, of 9306 Worth ave., Silver Spring, Md., is probably the world's only builder of washing machines for typewriters. (He's supervising foreman of PBA's typewriter shop.)

Thompson

The conventional way to clean a typewriter is to take it apart, clean and oil the parts, and then put them back together again.

Paul's way was inspired by the wartime manpower shortage. He removes the rubber platen and "feet," puts the typewriter in his special washing machine, and swishes out the dirt with a cleaning solution.

Then he dunks the typewriter in a cold water rinse, dries it with a blast of compressed air, and lubricates it by dipping it in an oil solution.

The platen is cleaned and replaced, and the job is finished in 25 minutes. The old way takes four times as long.

Several typewriter firms are now eying the process because it's not only faster but more thorough. However, the Government owns the original typewriter washing machine because Paul invented it with Federal funds.

ANY SIGNIFICANCE?

I have no personal knowledge of this, but a female District Liner says it's so.

In the House Office Building, the powder rooms are distinguished by the word "Women"; but in the Senate Office Building the label reads "Ladies."

THAT'S ALL

There's nothing wrong with the Nats that a winning streak wouldn't cure.

STREET SCENE

The truck and the bus were rolling down 11th st. nw. side by side, stopping for the same traffic lights.

On the front seat of the truck, alongside the driver, sat a man holding an unpacked birthday cake. Every time the truck stopped, the jerk would almost topple the big cake off the man's lap, and he and the driver would laugh uproariously.

The passengers on the bus followed the scene in bewilderment for several blocks, until the truck turned off. And to the bitter end, nobody could figure out what was so all-fired funny.

EYEBROW RAISER

It's pretty hard to shock a desk sergeant, because policemen hear all sorts of strange stories in the course of their work.

But a friend of ours on the force must have raised his eyebrows when a pretty young telephone operator walked in one day recently and said:

"I'd like to make out a report about my skirt. I lost it in a taxi."

The eyebrows came back down into place again when the young lady explained how it happened. She was carrying the skirt in an envelope, so that she could change when she got to work.

OH, SURE

From Harriet K. Doyle, of 1731 Lyman pl. ne., comes the story of a gal who did something about the weather:

She wore her stockings inside out
All through the summer heat.
She said it cooled her off to turn
The hose upon her feet.

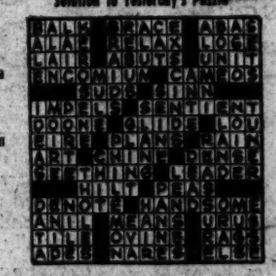
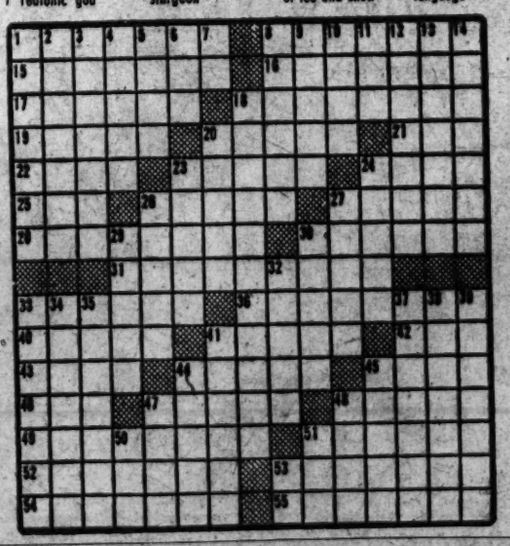
Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle





Leonard Lyons

He Sees No Peace In Music

New York.—Arturo Toscanini read the series of statements by Serge Koussevitsky about music as a force for world peace—that music is a universal instrument which could bring together and dissolve all the conflicts of the nations of the world. Toscanini found amusement in this peace theory proposed by a distinguished musician. "How can musicians bring peace to the world," said Toscanini, "when as soon as you get three musicians together, there's always a fight?"

Leonard Lyons

In the hallway leading to the office of Secretary of the Interior Krug are a series of oil portraits of former Secretaries, covering a 90-year span. In large part these were painted by Henry S. Hubbell, whose life portrait of Roosevelt hangs in the library at Hyde Park . . . The portraits are so lifelike that some visitors —myself included—mistakenly assumed that Hubbell had merely retouched them and then signed as his own, originals executed by earlier painters, which error I regret . . . This is how the painting project began.

When Hubbell was a barefoot boy in Lawrence, Kans., John P. Usher, a surviving member of Lincoln's Cabinet, was the great man of this small town. . . . In a dark storeroom of the Interior Department was found a portrait of Usher, one of a number of black and white crayons on paper, which were not thought suitable enough to hang. Hubbell felt that his fellow townsman was being discriminated against. He therefore painted a portrait of Usher. The Department of Interior not only bought it but also decided to have the entire series of crayon portraits of former Secretaries replaced by oil paintings. Hubbell was commissioned to paint the series.

Rodgers and Hammerstein are discussing with Al Capp a project for a musical adaption of his Li'l Abner . . . Marion Hargrove is at work on his second book . . . a novel which will be published by Wm. Sloane Associates in the spring. The other favored GI writer, Bill Mauldin, also is working on a second book, which Sloane will publish. Both are doing their work in separate offices at Sloane's . . . Orson Welles completed his movie version of "Macbeth" yesterday, on schedule, establishing a record both for him and for Hollywood. He had his cast record their speaking lines first, and then did the camera work to play-backs.

Alva Johnson, who is writing a series on the late Wilson Mizner, has been conferring about him with Swifty Morgan, the fabulous soldier-of-fortune, playboy, sporting figure and tile salesman. Before each session Johnson gives Swifty a $100 check. "Swifty stops right at $100 worth," Johnson reports. "As soon as one page is finished, he says he knows no more" . . . In Florida a few years ago Swifty told Al Jolson: "I belive in reincarnation. I'll die soon and in 1951 I'm coming back as a horse, win the Preakness and the Kentucky Derby and you're the only one who knows it." Morgan says that Jolson told this story of a man-who-comes-back-as-a-horse to a movie studio and threatens suit. "But you'll be dead by 1951," Johnson reminded Swifty, "so how can you sue? What lawyer will take it?" "Yes, I'll be dead by then," said Swifty, "that's why I've retained the ghost of Abe Hummel to bring suit."

I Love You Dearly

I love you dearly every day . . . From dawn to afternoon . . . And every hour after that . . . Until I see the moon . . . I love you in the twilight when . . . The shadows move about . . . And all throughout the night until . . . The silver stars go out . . . When I am climbing up the hill . . . However high and steep . . . And when I put my work away . . . To go to bed and sleep . . . In every happy thought or dream . . . That passes through my mind . . . And in the memory of all . . . That we have left behind . . . I love you with my heart and soul . . . Despite whatever strife . . . And I shall go on loving you . . . As long as I have life.
